Marsha Warrington Grilled Relentlessly on Stand by California Prosecutor.

COMPELLED TO ANSWER

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—Marsha Warrington, one of the girls arrested in Reno, Nev., with Maury I. Diggs and Drew Caminetti last March, was calm and her voice, though too low at times to be heard in all parts of the court room, was steady when she resumed her testimony today against Diggs.

Federal Judge Van Fleet, who is presiding over the trial of the "white slave" law, reprimanded the witness several times for not speaking loudly enough.

Questions asked by Prosecutor Rosse were calculated to draw from her the facts concerning the elopement of herself, Lola Norris and the two young men from Sacramento to Reno without using polite expressions to describe the actions of the four elopers.

The government's special prosecutor shot queries at the young woman rapidly, demanding that she explain in detail all the actions of the two couples from the time they arrived in Reno.

Strained to Catch Every Word.

The spectators who occupied every seat strained to catch every word.

"Upon your arrival, after having lunched at the restaurant you mentioned in your last answer yesterday, Miss Warrington, what did you do?" was the first of Prosecutor Rosse's questions.

"Mr. Diggs, Miss Norris, Mr.

Women Are Pinned Under Auto in Crash

Three Victims of Accident on Commonwealth Avenue.

Two women and a girl, members of the family of Charles A. Bohn of No. 108 Sheridan street, Jamaica Plain, were badly injured today when the automobile in which they were riding skidded and overturned on Commonwealth avenue, near the Infant Asylum, the machine skidded, the chauffeur lost control of the wheel and the heavy machine crashed into a tree, overturning.

The chauffeur escaped without serious injury.

Two Hurt Trying to Escape Live Wire

Women Passengers Collapse in Chelsea Car Accident.

Two men were injured and several women became terrified in a rush to escape death, when the trolley wire broke and became tangled with a Boston bound Bay State electric car, midway between the Naval Hospital and the North drawbridge on Broadway, Chelsea, today.

George Gass, of No. 120 Congress street, sustained slight injuries. David Berman, of No. 183 Spruce street, Chelsea, was caught in the rush and sustained a badly sprained ankle. Other passengers were bruised. Several women collapsed.

The broken wire was highly charged as it lay over the crowded car, flashing fire in all directions as it came in contact with the rails below.

Big Contest for Boston Postal Job

Burleson Considers Several as Superintendent of Delivery.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The appointment of a superintendent of delivery at the Boston postoffice has brought about one of the liveliest runs that Postmaster General Burleson has yet been called upon to settle.

Mayor Fitzgerald, Martin M. Lomasney, former Assistant District Attorney John H. Casey and others influential in Democratic politics are backing John W. McGrath, a veteran postal employe.

Congressman Curley is supporting John A. McMahon, president of the local branch of the postal clerks, for the vacancy.

William F. Curley also has considerable backing. Congressmen Peters is said to espouse his appointment. And Congressman Murray has a dark horse from his own district.

'CHANCES ARE GOOD,' SAYS FOSS

Governor Foss said today that his chances for the Republican nomination for Governor "seem very good"—if he decides to run.

He figures that the entry of Congressman A. P. Gardner will only help his candidacy—if he becomes a candidate.

He says he hears that the Republican leaders are displaying fear of his now.

The Governor also took a few minutes to attack the Democratic State machine for trying to draft a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. He said that method was against the spirit of the direct primary and was thought to have gone out with the abolition of the convention system.

The Governor's statement today was:

The Statement.

The chances for my nomination in the Republican primaries—in case I decide to enter—seem very good.

I understand many of the Republican leaders are of this opinion since Congressman Gardner's entry.

I am told that they are showing signs of fear of my nomination. The situation in the Republican party to me appears optimistic.

I see that the Democratic State machine leaders are still working their heads off to draft a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor suitable to them.

This is certainly a direct violation of the spirit of the direct primary act that they so strongly advocated when the Republican party was in power in the State.

Flagrant Inconsistency.

Drafting of a candidate by a party organization for important State offices was supposed to be done away with when the convention system was abolished. The Democratic leaders opposed the convention system when they approved the direct primary act, and they should keep faith with the people. Their action in looking around for a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor who will suit their purposes is a flagrant piece of inconsistency.

Governor Foss today assured Councillor Guy A. Hum that a reply to the latter's letter asking the Governor, first, whether he was a candidate and, second, whether he would abide by the result of the Republican primaries, was in preparation. Hum is a supporter of Colonel Benton.

The Executive Council met today, thereby causing Governor Foss and Lieutenant-Governor Walsh to meet again for the second time since the latter's announcement of his candidacy. Hefty exchange of greetings was cordial.

OFFICER STUNNED BY BLOW

Two policemen, trying to take to the station house a man they had arrested after a quarter of a mile chase through the West End, were beset by over a hundred of the man's friends in the West End today and had to fight their way through the crowd.

The man arrested was James Sawtelle of No. 120 Merrimac street. The officers were Inspectors Concannon and Smith. Inspector Smith was hit on the head during the scuffle and stunned, but held on to the prisoner.

The crowd shouted, "Take him away!" "Get him!" "Don't let them have him!" "You don't dare take him to the station!" The officers climbed Beacon Hill and took a short cut through the Court House to Pemberton Square. The crowd followed through the Court House and surrounded Police Headquarters but were dispersed.

The two officers saw Sawtelle take a $5 bill from the pocket of Daniel G. Sullivan of No. 536 Pearl street, Manchester, N. H.

They were standing on the opposite side of the street and jumped for the man. Sawtelle ran and Smith captured him after a spurt of a mile chase.

Sullivan was arrested on a technical charge of drunkenness and held as a witness against Sawtelle.

Two Women Injured As Car Jumps Rail

Electric Leaps Into Stonewall After Coasting Down Hill.

An electric car coasting down the Adams street hollow between King and Hill street, Dorchester, jumped the track early today, slid across the road and up over the sidewalk and jammed into the stone wall in front of the Harris school. There were thirty passengers aboard.

Mrs. Anna Burke of No. 35 Houghton street, Neponset, was on the sidewalk, coming up the hill. The car struck her before she could get out of the way. She was knocked over the stone wall, and was painfully bruised, with possible internal injuries.

Another woman on the front seat of the car was thrown forward against the railing and suffered severe bruises.

J. N. Cole Chairman of Economy Board

John N. Cole, the Andover publisher, former Speaker of the House and one of the best-known Republicans in the State, was appointed chairman of the Commission on Economy and Efficiency at $5,000 a year today by Governor Foss. The chairmanship has been vacant ever since Norman H. White gave it up to be the Bull Moose candidate in the Thirteenth Congressional District's special election.

Francis N. Tyrrell, a member of the commission from the first and acting chairman since Mr. White resigned, has been a candidate for the permanent chairmanship.

PATHETIC PLIGHT OF GOVERNOR

Weeps on Hearing Assembly's Action; Summons Judge Herrick, His Counsel.

WIFE'S HEROIC SACRIFICE

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Shortly before noon Governor Sulzer, impeached by the lower branch of the Legislature, took possession of his inner offices of the executive suite at the Capitol and summoned his chief special legal adviser, D. Cady Herrick.

Judge Herrick hurried to the room where the Governor awaited him, brushing past the newspaper men as though on an important mission. It is believed that Judge Herrick was armed with a Supreme Court writ to fortify the position taken by the Governor that he is still in the gubernatorial harness.

According to the prevailing opinion of lawyers in the Legislature, Governor Sulzer ceases automatically to exercise the constitutional functions of his office the moment the articles of impeachment are filed with the Senate and the Court of Appeals. Lieutenant-Governor Martin H. Glynn will then assume the duties of the chief executive.

Governor Sulzer was impeached by a vote of 79 to 45. The specific charge in the indictment of "high crimes and misdemeanors" was that he used moneys contributed to his campaign for speculation in Wall street. The vote was taken at 5:15 o'clock, after a night of acrimonious debate.

Mrs. Sulzer Ready to Testify.

Wall Street has claimed many victims, both high and low, but few cases has afforded a more pathetic spectacle than that of Governor Sulzer, standing alone after having fought his way up the political ladder through fifteen years or more of gruelling battle.

To controvert evidence produced by the Frawley Legislative Committee, which showed that Governor Sulzer had used money contributed to his campaign for stock speculation, Mrs. Sulzer was

BELL BOY IS SENT TO JAIL

Isadore B. Bowman, a former bellboy at the Hotel Vendome, pleaded guilty today in the Superior Criminal Court to three charges of breaking and entering and also to two charges of receiving stolen goods, and was sentenced to State prison for a term of three and one-half to five years.

Previously to receiving his sentence Bowman made a plea to Judge Pratt, asking clemency of the court inasmuch as he helped the police to recover much of the stolen property.

Bowman robbed the hotel guests of jewelry worth at least $4,000. He made a copy of the pass keys used to enter rooms and then robbed them at his leisure.

prepared to go upon the stand to testify that she indorsed her husband's name to checks without his knowledge, and used them for stock purchases. Even this noble wifely sacrifice, declared the Governor's opponents, would not save him from political annihilation when the impeachment proceedings are actually begun by the managers appointed by the Assembly.

When the Governor reached the capitol today he was asked how he felt, and replied: "Fine; it's a nice breezy morning."

He seemed to be in excellent spirits and posed for his picture at the foot of the capitol steps.

Although both houses of the Legislature were scheduled to meet at 11 o'clock it was long after that hour when the lawmakers, hollow-eyed and sleepy in appearance, began to arrive.

Governor Weeps at News.

Governor Sulzer's friends, including Republicans, Democrats and one loan Progressive, made a spirited fight, but the antagonists were strong in numbers and logic and were able to prevail.

While the all night battle raged, Governor Sulzer remained alone in the executive mansion, or "People's House," as he calls it, refusing to see any one or to be seen. Comforted only by his wife, he remained in lonely vigil until after dawn, when a messenger informed him that he had been impeached. Tears streamed down the Governor's face when he heard the news.

Governor Sulzer will be tried by the Senate and a majority of the judges of the State Court of Appeals, the evidence being presented against him by managers appointed by the assembly.

Directly after the vote had been taken in the Assembly, Speaker Smith appointed Assemblyman Van Woert, Cole and Bradley to inform the Senate officially of the impeachment.

Charges Against Sulzer.

Briefly, the articles of impeachment which were presented to the Senate today charge that Governor Sulzer is guilty of the following allegations:

That he filed a false statement of campaign contributions with the Secretary of State, such statement having caused "a great scandal" and reproach of the Governor of the State of New York, and that the said statement did not contain all the contributions received by him and that he was guilty of a misdemeanor in failing to file a true report.

That while Governor William Sulzer induced Louis R. Sczecsky, Frederick Crowell and Melville B. Fuller by fraudulent methods to withhold certain testimony from the Frawley committee, and that such acts were the commission of a felony.

That the Governor practiced deceit and fraud and used threat and menaces intended to prevent the committee and other witnesses subpoenaed from producing books and papers desired by the committee, such act having been a misdemeanor.

That in preventing or disuading Frederick L. Colwell from attending the hearing of the Frawley committee the Governor was also guilty of a misdemeanor in having violated Section 2441 of the penal law.

That prior to his election the Governor appropriated campaign contributions to his own use, employing the same, or a large part thereof, to speculate in stocks, and that he thereby stole such checks and was guilty of larceny.

That he promised and threatened to use his office to affect the vote of certain public officials, including Assemblyman C. Prime of Essex and Thaddeus C. Sweet of Oswego.

That the Governor corruptly used his authority as Governor to affect the price of securities on the New York Stock Exchange, in some of which he was speculating, and in other ways sought to influence legislation.

In conclusion the articles read:

"The Assembly demands that the Governor answer concerning all these matters before the court which is to hear the charges, and offers to present proof of said matters at such time as the honorable court for the trial of impeachment may order and appoint."

First Governor to Be Impeached.

History of an unprecedented nature History of an unprecedented nature has been made, for never before has a Gover-

The debate which led up to the vote was marked by dramatic features, "but even the fiery oratory could not keep awake the spectators who filled the gallery. The most interested were the women, who remained awake until the final roll call. A number of the men slept in their chairs and a buzz of snores proclaimed the superiority of slumber over forensic efforts.

Majority Leader Levy made the final address before the vote was taken, and he blended eloquence with facts in a convincing manner. Mr. Levy read a great part of the testimony by the Frawley Committee before he declared, in solemn tones, that "William Sulzer should be impeached in the name of the Commonwealth and common honesty."

Mr. Levy denied that the impeachment proceedings were being rushed by Tammany leaders, declaring that under the circumstances the impeachment court cannot sit until thirty days have elapsed.

Governor Sulzer is criticised for his reported acquiescence to his wife's declaration that she was unwittingly responsible for the Wall Street speculation charges.

He should not try to hide behind petticoats to save his political face, say his opponents.

Friends of the impeached Governor are deeply distressed today over the action of the Assembly. They still maintain that politics of a Tammany taint is rampant in the executive halls. They go so far as to predict that acting Governor Glynn, who is expected soon to be the occupant of the executive chamber, will be given full opportunity to designate appointments made by the Governor, as it is expected that no impeachment proceedings will be held until late in October.

These friends of the Governor find solace in the fact that in addition to the seventy-six votes necessary to impeach, Tammany could muster but three additional votes. They point out that fourteen Republicans voted to sustain the Governor, and feel that it was rock ribbed political tactics which forced those who voted favorably on the impeachment resolution to do so.

That Governor Sulzer will fight back through the medium of exposures of prominent Tammany legislators who so far have been successful in the first round of the fight to accomplish his downfall, is also strongly hinted at.

Sulzer to Strike Back.

The impeached Governor will have plenty of time to dig up damaging evidence and will do his utmost to bring calumny home to those whom he has heretofore more than hinted were grafters who must be driven out of the party.

It is not believed that the impeached Governor will be forced to vacate the executive mansion, although he may feel in home bound to do so. Lieutenant-Governor Glynn has a home of his own in one of the most exclusive residence sections in the city, and a Summer home at Cedar Hill.

That the knotty tangle in which the Democrats now find themselves, was due to the uncompromising attitude of Governor Sulzer, was claimed by organization Democrats. They declare that Mr. Sulzer frowned on all attempts made by the leaders "to get together," and that they had to "get him" that it was known that Sulzer had a checkered past in spite of his continued declarations that he was walking the straight and narrow.

All sorts of "I told you so's" were forthcoming from Democratic legislators, and whispers of more incriminating pages of the Governor's life found utterance. A prominent Democratic member said that the Frawley committee had in reserve a mass of evidence which, if used, would create more scandal, of which the Governor would be the victim. This material may be brought out during the future sessions of the Frawley committee.

PRESIDENT LOWELL of Harvard and Mrs. Lowell, snapped on their return today from a triumphal tour of Europe. President Lowell met the Kaiser and other rulers.

After several weeks of exciting experiences, President and Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard returned on the Lacania today.

President and Mrs. Lowell were received by the Kaiser and rode in a Zeppelin airship. On the boat on the way back, President Lowell captained the married men's tug-of-war team. With Dr. Samuel Eliot as one of the men on his team, he won the event.

The prize was a "belt," so for two shillings a belt was bought in the ship barber shop, and President Lowell wore it around his neck at the concert that night.

But all such frivolity was cast aside when the Lacania docked. When someone asked a question about his experiences aboard, President Lowell said:

"Oh, no, no—dear me, no! I have nothing to say."

CHARGE GIRL WAS HELD BY DEATH THREAT

The case of a "Little Lost Sister," who is the daughter of a highly respected Maine family and who alleges that she was kept in bondage by a threat of death made by the man who lured her from her Down East home, was placed before United States Commissioner Hayes in the Federal Building today. Mottrades Kutsumekos, known as James Brown, of Nashua, N. H., was arraigned and held in $10,000 for a hearing August 20, charged with violating the "White Slave" act.

The girl is Ethel J. Hight, and twenty-three. Her guide through all her troubles, the Federal authorities say, was a copy of the "Gospel of St. Matthew," Kutsumekos and the girl were taken into custody by Lowell last night. The girl had the "Gospel of St. Matthew" in her hand when arrested.

Special Agent Schmid told Commissioner Hayes that after leaving her Maine home Miss Hight went to Nashua, N. H. From Nashua, according to Schmid, Kutsumekos took the "Little Lost Sister" to Lowell.

The chief of police of Lowell, who has co-operated with the government agent in the case, turned over to Schmid a full list of money received by the Maine girl while she was held in Lowell, as she alleged. Schmid believes he kept the account book to use against Kutsumekos as count evidence when the opportunity for her to escape offered itself.

The girl was escorted in a Boston wanderers' home until the time for trial.

Laconia Brings 1,471 Passengers

The Laconia, which docked today, brought 157 saloon, 488 second cabin and 826 steerage passengers. Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Eliot were aboard. Dr. Eliot had been abroad to attend the Triennial Congress of Liberal Religions at Paris. Mr. and Mrs. Otto Belt, with their four children, were passengers. Belt was Cecil Rhodes partner in Africa and is one of the wealthiest men in England.

Big Planked Steak Surprises Archer

It Was Moxie Man's Birthday, With Cabbage on the Side.

F. M. Archer of the Moxie Company, who for thirty years has eaten lunch daily at the North Station restaurant, was surprised yesterday at the unusual substitute of Head Waiter Joseph Buckley.

Mr. Buckley met Mr. Archer at the door—bowed him to a select seat and then suggested:

"The planked steak is very fine today."

"All right," said Mr. Archer, a little dazed. He gasped when he saw an extra large porterhouse laid on to state, upon the largest plank in the kitchen, and with two candles burning upon it.

Then Mr. Buckley appeared with a cabbagehead, spiked on a bottle of Moxie, and into which were stuck twenty-five candles.

"We pretended that he was twenty-five, instead of fifty-one, and the cabbage head meant anything you like," said Mr. Buckley today.

"How much," asked Mr. Archer, when he had finished.

"All paid for," said the head waiter. Freeman Young of the company had arranged the surprise.

Finds Shoe Makers Used "Blacklist"

Cornellier Wins Against Haverhill Manufacturers' Association.

Arthur P. Hardy, sitting as master in the suit of John Cornellier against the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association, today returned a supplementary report in favor of Cornellier.

Cornellier asked damages on the ground that the Association had "blacklisted" him and others as a result of his participation in a strike of the Witherell, Jobbins shoe company employes. Mr. Hardy finds that such a tacit understanding not to employ Cornellier and others did exist. Damages will be determined by the Supreme Court.

CURBSTONE LOAN 'SHARK' FINED $200

Max Finkelstein, who pleaded guilty to violating the anti-loan shark law, came into the Municipal Court today and was fined $200. He paid the money. Judge Murray said in fining him:

This law was made to be enforced. If you come into this court again you go to jail.

Commissioner of Small Loans E. Gerry Brown today investigated new complaints against Finkelstein, who is a curbstone loan agent, doing business among the merchants of the North End.

Extortions, entailing the loss of his wife's carriage, two diamond rings, the family furniture, his children's piano, and finally resulting in his bankruptcy, are alleged to have been practiced against T. Singer of Leverett street by Finkelstein.

Singer asserts that his acquaintance with Finkelstein dates back several years, and that the "Curbstone Broker" often charged him 150 per cent. interest. He runs a small dry goods store on Leverett street, and first went to Finkelstein when business was dull. From that day, he declares, he has been so hounded that his family has suffered almost unbelievable hardships.

The complaint upon which Finkelstein comes up for sentence today was brought by Louis Gart, of No. 15 Revere street. He charged Finkelstein with trying to collect $2000 in return for a loan of $240 for fifty days.

Finkelstein is registered as a cornice worker. His place of business is given as No. 37 Spring street, and he lives at No. 92 North Russel street.

Urges Suburbanite for Crocker's Post

A man living in one of Boston's suburban wards (not the Back Bay) should be named to succeed the late George G. Crocker on the Boston Transit Commission, according to Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor has told this to Governor Foss.

One point made by the Mayor was that a man who is forced to go through Dudley street "L" terminal daily should get the job. He recommended that the Governor ask suburban improvement societies to submit names.

The appointment of David A. Ellis, former chairman of the Boston School Board, is opposed by the Mayor on the ground that the Back Bay has had enough favors in Transit Commission appointments in the first place and that Mr. Ellis' district is not bothered by transit problems in the next.

Militants Deranged, Declares Dr. Hardy

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The mental condition of suffragettes was the subject of a paper by the famous surgeon, Nelson Hardy, before the Medical Congress today. Part of his address was ruled out as "politics," but he was permitted to say: "These women, many well educated and carefully raised, who commit crimes worthy of savages and disregard all laws, human and divine, are victims of an epidemic of mental disorder."

Says Mad Surgeon Killed His Patient

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 13.—The wife of Dr. William S. Dabney, a surgeon of Marietta, O., applying for his commitment to Longview Hospital, said that several months ago while she was performing a surgical operation in a Marietta hospital, he slashed right and left with his operating knife, and attaches of the hospital had to take him in charge. The patient, a well-known Ohioan, she declared, was killed.

Wilson Marriage Rumor a 'Falsehood'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The White House characterizes the report that the wedding of Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, and Mr. Francis B. Sayre is to take place next month, instead of in November, as originally announced, as an "unwarranted falsehood."

Thursday—Blue Ribbon Day—At Gilchrist's

MONEY-SAVING OPPORTUNITIES

Crowding Fast This Eventful August

The Added Incentive Just Now to Convert All Summer Goods Into Money

DRIVES DOWN THE PRICES

August, ordinarily a quiet month, becomes active. The Innovation Sale, a real innovation, presents something unusual—stirring economies each day, centering the interest at Gilchrist's.

Now comes Blue Ribbon Day—the Best Bargain Day of all. This advertisement looks like all Blue Ribbon advertisements—no innovation about the style—nor the sale in fact—but the savings ring true. And there is this to be remembered, also—

Blue Ribbon Day is a One-Day occasion.

Wise to shop early—for while the bargains are expected to last the day out, the supply often becomes exhausted in a few hours.

Wise to read every item, for while the print is not large, the savings are decidedly worth while.

This Is the Law of Blue Ribbon Day Rigidly Enforced { Merchandise must be offered at the lowest prices of the entire month, and lower in price than the same, or equally desirable goods, can be obtained in any other store in Boston.

THE STORE OF GILCHRIST'S BOSTON PRIZE WINNERS — THURSDAY AUG. 14 — BLUE RIBBON DAY — THURSDAY AUG. 14 — THE STORE OF GILCHRIST'S BOSTON PRIZE WINNERS

WALSH TALKS OVER MEN FOR SECOND PLACE

Chairman Riley of the Democratic State Committee, Mayor Fitzgerald and Lieutenant Governor Walsh are expected to meet today to confer on the names of four men under consideration for support for second place with Walsh on the Democratic ticket against Edward P. Barry of South Boston. Two of the men talked of are expected to give their answers today.

It is declared Arthur T. Lyman, Thomas J. Boynton of Everett and Richard H. Long, a prominent Republican and shoe manufacturer of South Framingham, are among those under consideration.

Mr. Long has been prominently identified with the fight against the United Shoe Machinery Company. He is a large independent shoe manufacturer, and has for some time shown signs of breaking away from the Republican party.

In the Thirteenth district fight he took the stump for the Democratic candidate, John J. Mitchell. He was a big factor in the Democratic victory in that district. Mr. Long was at one time an opponent of Congressman Joan W. Weeks. He is an able stump speaker, and many Democratic leaders believe he would lend great strength to the ticket.

Mayor Fitzgerald had a little chat with Governor Foss, and told him he was going to circulate nomination papers in Essex County.

"Fine, fine!" exclaimed the Governor.

"But for Dave Walsh," added the Mayor.

"Great, great!" returned the Governor. An interesting bit of gossip in regard to Congressman Gardner's ambition to head the G. O. P. was fast he has his eye on the national Senate and believes the Governor's chair will make a convenient stepping-stone to succeed his father-in-law, Senator Lodge.

Burleson Now Wants Murray as Typist

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—"Just as soon as you get back to Boston, write me a letter setting forth all the facts in the case," said Postmaster-General Burleson in discussing a matter of patronage with Congressman Murray of Charlestown today.

"What's the matter with writing it now," replied Murray, as he observed the idle typewriter behind Burleson's desk.

"But my stenographers are all busy," said the P. M. with an evident desire to dismiss the matter.

"Never mind that. I'll write it myself," and Murray sat down and clicked forth the letter on the cabinet typewriter, while Burleson looked on with surprise.

"If you're ever out of a job and I need a stenographer, you're my man," was the Postmaster General's remark to the Congressman.

Liggett Party Is Overcome by News

Mrs. Louis K. Liggett and her daughters, Janice and Musa, landed from the Lacomia today and on the dock were met by a friend, who told them that Mr. Liggett, president of the United Drug Company, had been operated on last week for appendicitis at the Corey Hill Hospital.

Mr. Liggett is recovering, but the shock of the news prostrated Mrs. Liggett for a time. She and the two daughters wept in each others' arms on the pier.

Assessors After All Tax Dodgers

Prominent citizens of Boston who for years have evaded their personal taxes, took notice today when they learned that the assessors have in their possession, for the first time in the board's history, a complete list of stockholders in many corporations.

This means that much personal property that has not been acknowledged by the owners will now have to stand a tax. The assessors are at work today going over these names and picking out the Bostonians and assessing them for the full value of their stock.

It is expected that the tax rate this year will be the highest ever recorded in the city history, reaching at least $17.20.

REP. JOHN J. COURTNEY OF SPRINGFIELD.

This is a Democratic member of the Legislature who voted for the Western Trolley Merger Bill which gave the New Haven Railroad more than half the trolleys in the State. This bill was condemned by the party platform, the leading newspapers in the Commonwealth, the Tax Commissioner, the Railroad Commission, the Public Franchise League and the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was vetoed by Governor Foss. About this bill the Railroad Commission had said:

"THE ESTABLISHED POLICY OF THE COMMONWEALTH WITH RECPECT TO KEEPING SEPARATE AND DISTINCT THE RAILROAD CORPORATIONS AND STREET RAILWAY COMPANIES IS A SYSTEM OF OFFICIAL ADMINISTRATION ENTIRELY CONSISTENT WITH THE PUBLIC INTEREST."

But Mr. Courtney did not hesitate to obey the command of the New Haven lobby in the face of all railroad experts and strong public opinion.

The bill for which he voted could do nothing for Western Massachusetts, but could do much for the railroad, and is the bill about which the Democratic platform said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH."

If you believe that this man ought to be retired into private life, please send us your name and address. We shall not publish it.

TALKS HOLD-UP AT HEARING ON HAMPDEN ROAD

After two hours of futile wrangling, the hearing before the Public Service Commission at the State House on the Hampden railroad controversy developed open hostility when Edgar J. Rich, counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad, accused the Commonwealth Trust Company, the National Shawmut Bank, the Old Colony Trust Company and the Hampden Railroad officials of "trying to hold up the Boston & Maine Railroad.

George Snow, counsel for the three banks in question, which hold Hampden railroad notes for $1,400,000, demanded that Mr. Rich's accusation be put into the record.

Messrs. Rich and Snow conferred at this point. Then Mr. Rich apologized to Mr. Snow's banking clients and withdrew his statement.

At this point Henry W. Ely, counsel for the Hampden railroad, said pointedly to Mr. Rich:

"Will you apologize to me, also?"

"No!" shouted Mr. Rich, bringing his fist down upon the patient table.

The hearing was adjourned without any progress being made.

Chairman Macleod of the commission said that the commission has exhausted all its powers in the matter and that, until the parties at controversy get together on some operating agreement, the commission will be able to take no further action.

This means that there is no definite outlook for early operation of the Hampden railroad.

Ambition Pills

For Nervous People

At last they're here and here to stay. The first time ever offered to the people of Boston, the famous Wendell's Ambition Pills—the great nerve tonic that will put vigor, vim and vitality into nervous, tired out, all in, despondent people in a few days.

Anyone can buy a box for only 50 cts., and all druggists are authorized by the maker to refund the purchase price if anyone is dissatisfied.

Thousands praise them for general debility, nervous prostration, mental depression and unstrung nerves caused by over-indulgence in alcohol, tobacco or excesses of any kind.

As a brain food or any affliction of the nervous system, Wendell's Ambition Pills are unsurpassed, while for hysteria, trembling and neuralgia they are simply splendid. Fifty cents at all druggists'. Mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by Wendell Pharmaral Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

COLE CALLS FOR HORIZONTAL FIRE ESCAPES

Fire Commissioner Cole recommends, to prevent in Boston a duplicate of the Binghampton and Triangle fire horrors, the equipment of factory buildings with horizontal instead of vertical fire escapes, enabling women to easily get to the adjoining buildings.

Testifying before the legislative committee investigating conditions under which women and children are employed in the larger cities of the Bay State, he also urged the prohibition of iron screens and bars on the first and second floors of factory buildings.

The reason offered for the use of such screens, he said, is that they prevent thefts by employes, who sometimes pass or throw property out of the windows to confederates. The screens result, however, in making access to the building more difficult for firemen.

Andrew M. Levis, first assistant engineer of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, declared that Boston's most serious fire hazard today is in the Morton street district of Mattapan, where many three-fatters are being erected with adjoining walls almost touching one another. York with her baggage.

What Street Car Conductor Has Been Longest in Service?

Friends of Daniel J. Crowley of No. 21 Plainfield street, Jamaica Plain, claim that in point of continuous service "Dan" Crowley holds the record for a New Englander on the rear end of the cars.

Here is "Old Dan's" record:

Came to this county in 1890, when twenty one.

Went to work as a watchman on the horse cars in the early days.

His service dates from March 20, 1876.

He spent seven years on the horse cars.

Began as a conductor January 1, 1884, which position he has held continuously ever since.

Next January he will have completed an even thirty years of "conductoring" in Boston.

During all that time he has lived in Jamaica Plain, and is at present No. 1200 of Division 1.

His daily "run" is from Forest Hills terminal to Grove street on the East Walpole line.

In 1870 he married his wife Mary, and eleven children blessed the union. Only three of them are living, however.

On Friday of this week "Old Dan" will be sixty-eight years old.

"Dan" has "broken in" nearly 500 new men in his long career, and he says he is good for as many more.

IF I HURT YOU DON'T PAY ME

"Never saw anything like it. You are ONE dentist that really delivers the goods. Two fourteen hour hours a day's work claim that one hurt me. Not a particle of pain."

ONE PRICE TO ALL

A man had read my ads, and being attracted by their straightforward, direct, truthful tone, had decided to give me a trial, and yet he stood on the corner and counted two black cards before he could raise the courage to enter my office. After the operation he told me about it. You will be half hour or so after that he was still skeptical about there being such a thing as painless dentistry.

Friends, it's the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. By the King system, of which I am the discoverer, I perform all dental operations absolutely without pain, and guarantee it.

HUERTA NOW INCLINED TO BE PEACEFUL

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 13.—Following the conference between Special American Envoy John Lind and the Mexican Foreign Minister, Manuel Gamboa, the belief prevailed here today that President Huerta would adopt a conciliatory attitude against the United States, realizing the hopelessness of trying to combat the vast power of Mexico's big neighbor. Culture at the National Palace declared that in substance President Huerta had said:

"While Mexico resents interference even from a friendly power in her domestic affairs, nevertheless we do not feel that we are in any way being coerced by the United States. We will make further protest against any efforts of Mr. Lind to settle affairs in this republic if he attempts to do so, but such action on our part will not be of a bellicose nature."

CASSIDY TELLS HOW PECAN NUTS ARE 'POLISHED'

Mr. Cassidy tells you today how you are deceived by the food cheaters and dopers with pecan nuts. The nuts are fixed up mechanically so the dealer can get better price for an inferior nut.

BY HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I went into one of your largest and best wholesale grocery houses yesterday and called for a pound of pecan nuts. The salesman showed me two varities in the shell.

One was the plain, ordinary wood colored nut. It sold for 30 cents a pound. The second variety had a polished surface resembling an ordinary varnished door of oak. It sold for 22 cents a pound.

I bought half a pound of each, and took the nuts to the AMERICAN office. One of the office boys wanted to see what I had in the bags.

I handed him one of the polished nuts. "What makes them so shiny?" he asked me. I soon showed him.

At my suggestion he took out his white pocket handkerchief, wet it, and rubbed the wet surface over the nut. His handkerchief was stained a brick red.

"Say, look at the paint," he exclaimed. "Do the kids eat that stuff?"

Children Eat Paint.

I told him that children do eat this paint in the kernel or meat of the nuts. For this paint or coloring matter which is just the same as ordinary roof paint is put on the nuts to conceal their inferiority.

You will find these painted pecans in all your stores. They are all artificially colored. Sometimes with cerude iron oxide which is ordinarily used in the manufacture of paint. Others are colored with coal tar dyes and still others with colors extracted from wood by means of wood alcohol.

Wood alcohol is a poison and ought never be used in food. The dealer will tell you these coloring matters evaporate. That depends entirely on whether the nuts are sealed or partly cracked as is frequently the case.

State Law Broken.

In this sale of pecans to me yesterday the State law was broken.

That coloring was put on there to conceal inferiority. By the State law the nuts are adulterated. Section 18 of Chapter 75 of the Revised laws says a food shall be deemed to be adulterated "IF IT IS COLORED, COATED, POLISHED OR POWDERED IN SUCH A MANNER AS TO CONCEAL ITS DAMAGED OR INFERIOR CONDITION; OR IF BY ANY MEANS IT IS MADE TO APPEAR BETTER OR OF GREATER VALUE THAN IT IS."

Capt. Hopkins Seeks Steamboat Place

Auburndale Man Latest Candidate to Succeed Sloane.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Applications for the position of supervising inspector of steamships at Boston continue to flow in upon the Department of Commerce.

Captain Herbert L. Hopkins of Auburndale, Mass., deputy shipping commissioner at Providence, R. I., is the latest to seek the place made vacant by the resignation of former Inspector Sloane.

Captain Hopkins is a licensed master and pilot of thirty years experience and secretary of Volunteer Harbor, No. 1, of the Master Mates and Pilots. He has strong endorsements from Massachusetts people.

Congressman Murray has endorsed Phillip F. Shaw, and Congressman Peters has also tentatively endorsed the Shaw candidacy. Congressman Curley has a candidate from the Twelfth District.

Find Morphine in Cripple's Crutch

South Boston Man Sentenced as Result of Discovery.

"You've got morphine hidden somewhere in this house," said Sergeant Livingston of the South Boston police today to John J. Smith of No. 62 West Sixth street. Smith is lame and walks with a crutch.

The keen eyes of the sergeant rested on Smith's crutch. Livingston grabbed the stick, pulled the rubber from the end and found morphine set in a hollow in the wood.

Smith and James Berino of the same address were sentenced to three months, August Polofski, No. 295 West Third street, was also sentenced for having morphine. He appealed.

Missing Girl Returns on Seeing American

Ella Brown of Beverly Back, but Silent on Disappearance.

"I saw my picture in the Boston AMERICAN with a story of my disappearance. Then—well, something made me return home. That's all there is to tell."

This was the only explanation seventeen-year-old Ella Brown of Rylside, Beverly, would give today concerning her mysterious disappearance after Sunday school in Beverly, August 3.

Where she read the AMERICAN'S report, she refused to tell. Her reasons for leaving home and where she was while away all are unknown. With the AMERICAN account in her possession and a smile she walked unconcernedly into her home last night.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

An English engineer is responsible for the design of a new type of gasoline engine, which is designed to run at the exceedingly high speed of 4,200 r.p.m. The engine has eight steel cylinders, arranged in V-form, on a tubular steel crank-case, and it is interesting to note that the bore of these cylinders is greater than the stroke, the measurements being respectively 2½ and 2¼ inches. They are set in staggard fashion, and it is said that the engine will develop 70 h. p. at normal speed.

An old friend, but eternally useful, is that stock-piece of advice anent leaving the car at night for any length of time: make it an invariable rule to shut off the gasoline supply, because if this is not done and there is a leak or a flooded carbureter, there may easily be a bad fire caused by some passerby with more time than brains throwing a lighted match or cigarette under the car. And if nothing worse happens, there is a waste of perfectly good and increasingly expensive fluid.

C. P. Rockwell, manager of the local branch of the Thomas B. Jeffersy Company, is spending a week touring through New England. At the present time he is catching a few speckled beauties in the Belgrade Lakes.

E. P. Weber, well known in the local tire industry, is on a westerntrip, visiting many of the automobile plants and incidentally spending a few pleasant days on Rocky River, in Ohio. Mr. Weber will return to Boston in about a week.

Joe Donovan, local retail distributor of the Studebaker cars, is on a week's trip to the Studebaker plant in Detroit. Mr. Donovan is making plans to bring to Boston an increased allotment of the famous Studebaker cars.

Sales Manager Swartz of the Metz Company is making a trip through the West. It is possible that he will make a trip to the coast in the interest of the Gilden tour winner before returning to the factory in Waltham.

'COP'S' JOB TOO LONESOME, SAYS ONE WHO QUIT

A policeman is "Ed" Harrington's idea of a lonesome party.

That's the reason why "Ed" is back in the fire department, after five dull weeks of pounding the pavement as a member of the Boston Police Department.

Edward T. Harrington, to use his full name, found patrolling too slow. He didn't make a single arrest. He didn't meet any runaways or burglars or maniacs or even any fair damsels in distress.

In the fire department one can scale burning walls, make rescues and have really lively times.

So back to the fire department for Harrington. He had been a fireman three years and was reinstated by Fire Commissioner Cole. It is the first case in years where a man who quit the fire department to become a "cop" was taken back.

But Harrington is now at East street engine house, and is perfectly happy, while he waits for something to "start 'em rolling."

He said today:

The life of a policeman is all right for one to whom it appeals. It does not appeal to me.

As a member of the fire department I became chained to a routine from which I found it very difficult to free myself. There is something alluring about the life of a fireman which cannot be defined.

When I patrolled different routes in the Lagrange street station the thoughts of my old routing made me lonely. I made up my mind to return to my old love. That's all there was to it.

I did not make any arrests. I had no occasion to. I found the policemen fine fellows. But I like the fire department better.

BUNGALOW GIRL WINCES AT QUIZ BY PROSECUTOR

Caminetti and myself—went to the Riverside Hotel. Miss Norris and I waited in a little parlor off the lobby while Mr. Caminetti and Mr. Diggs arranged for rooms. Then we went to the rooms."

Both Felt Frightened.

Answering further questions, Miss Warrington said:

"Miss Norris and I removed our hats and washed our faces. We both felt frightened." After three of Miss Warrington's answers failed to satisfy Prosecutor Roche in regard to the division of the party, Miss Warrington explained that the suite they occupied included two sleeping rooms and a bath room. Her face was crimson and her eyes were downcast as she answered questions relating to the preparations for retirement.

The relentless questioner drew from her every minute detail of every occurrence of the night. Often the answers were only audible to the court stenographer, who repeated in a strident voice what the girl had said.

In detail the girl told of the departure from the hotel to the bungalow which Diggs and Caminetti had paid one month's rent in advance. As she walked the court room the crowd edged forward, the occupants of each row leaning far over the backs of the seats in front.

Every nerve was taxed to catch the words of the story that fell from the girl's tightly drawn lips.

After a lengthy argument over the form of a question asked by Prosecutor Roche and objected to by Attorney Devlin for the defence, Judge Van Fleet ordered the attorneys to their seats and the court himself asked what Roche meant by the question.

"We lived together as man and wife," was Miss Warrington's answer.

"By 'we' whom do you mean?" asked the prosecutor.

"Mr. Diggs and myself; Miss Norris and Caminetti."

Prosecutor Roche made it plain in his argument with Attorney Devlin that the government intended to bring out every detail of the alleged improper conduct of the couples.

Many of the spectators refused to leave their places of vantage during the lunch hour. Many had brought lunches with them.

Lola Norris Next Witness.

When Miss Warrington was excused, Lola Norris, who was Caminetti's companion in the flight, was called as the next witness.

Martin Beasley, uncle of Miss Warrington, Chief of Police W. H. Johnson of Sacramento, Juvenile Court Clerk M. J. Sullivan and Colonel J. H. Chambers, managing editor of the Sacramento Bee, will close the case for the government.

At 7 a. m. today, three hours before the time for the opening of the court, men and women began forming in line in the upper corridor of the federal building, hoping to win the forty-eight coveted seats.

Barricade to Keep Crowd Out.

A plank barricade was built across the short corridor leading into the courtroom and the crowd was lined up four abreast behind it.

Miss Warrington was frightened, shrinking, and frequently her voice broke. But so far as her story has gone it tends absolutely to sustain the charges made against Diggs by the Government special prosecutors.

She swore that Diggs induced her to leave her Sacramento home and go with him to Reno, Nev., because he dinned into her ears that she was to be exposed and arrested if she attempted longer to remain in the State.

In her story of their early acquaintance there was no hint of Diggs having found her a wilful young girl, both that he had been the agent of her downfall.

At the time the girl was on the stand Diggs was leaning forward so that he might not miss a word. The story did not always come readily. The girl hesitated again and again at questions that betrayed a momentary abandonment of her modesty.

Once in a while Diggs switched his glance to the jury, and occasionally he paled as the girl accused him. But they were too intent on watching Miss Warrington to notice it. Caminetti listened as closely and seemed more nervous as the girl's recital went on.

Presented Girlish Appearance.

She was dressed in a modishly tailored suit of tiny black and white check. The rolling collar of her coat was extremely girlish. Her waist was of laundered blue batiste, which stood out crisply. Her deep brown eyes peered through a plain white veil. Her hair clung closely to her ears. The nose, a little pensive, is straight and well moulded. Her complexion is that clear California wonder, with touches of coral on the high places of her cheeks. Her mouth is small and straight; her lips very red.

Miss Warrington possibly is five feet two inches high and will weigh 120 pounds. She fumbled nervously with her flat leather purse, awaiting the question.

Mrs. Thayer Brings New Style in Dogs

Arrives on Laconia with Shaggy West Highland Terrier.

The newest style in dogs appeared when the Laconia docked today. Mrs. Bayard Thayer, who returned with her three children from a six weeks' stay abroad, brought also a white West Highland terrier—a squatty little dog with more than his share of hair, and fitted by nature for a good job as a decoration. Mrs. Thayer also brought a pack of beagle hounds.

JAR OF TEAMS CAUSED PAINS

Lowell Woman Relates How Var-ne-sis Conquered Painful Disease.

"Suffering untold agonies so that even the noise of teams made me cry out from the pain as they passed the house; to be fed like a child and lifted on a sheet, was my condition when I commenced taking Var-ne-sis," said Mrs. Lizzie Northrop, who lives at 23 Blodgett street, Lowell, Mass. "I guess if it had not been for this medicine I would be in the cemetery by now.

"Like every one else I tried any and everything that was recommended; they all seemed to be sure they had a cure, but I got gradually worse as most of the medicine I took disturbed my stomach. I was about discouraged, but hearing so much about this Var-ne-sis I decided to try it; I saw almost at once that it was different, pains were not so severe—the stiffness of my joints became less noticeable and I began to improve rapidly so that today I have not a pain or an ache—I feel fine, thanks to Var-ne-sis."

"It is just such cases that have built up the reputation and sales of my remedy," said Mr. Varney. "It is simply that I have gotten out of the beaten path of the ordinary drugs so often given for stomach trouble and rheumatism. My remedy reaches the cause and goes to the root of the trouble, the stomach and liver; increases the power of the blood to throw off the disease. Get these organs in good condition and, I repeat, disease cannot exist."

Many are daily taking advantage to consult Mr. Varney and his physician, and it was stated that they would continue to meet the public every day at the Riker-Jaynes drug store, 90 Washington street, corner Hanover, to explain more about this remedy. Adv.

Adopted Daughter Is Sexton's Bride

Portsmouth Man, Three Months' Widower, Weds at Cohasset.

Cornelius H. Parslow, seventy years old, sexton of the Episcopal Church, Portsmouth, N. H., a widower of less than three months, quietly stole a march on his friends by going to Cohasset, where he married Miss Georgianna Shattuck, his adopted daughter, at the Episcopal Church. The rector, Rev. Howard P. Barlow, officiated.

The couple started on a short honeymoon trip through New England before returning to Portsmouth.

Beats Wife Who Threw Away Beer

Randolph Man Is Fined $50 and Is Jailed a Month.

The best excuse Charles B. Cushing of Randolph offered in Quincy court today for beating his daughter with a mop handle and cutting her forehead open with a bread board and for hitting his wife with a plate was that Mrs. Cushing threw away his beer or "precious liquid," as he called it.

Judge Avery fined Cushing $50 for the assault and sent him to the House of Correction for a month for drunkenness.

Mrs. Cushing was picking blueberries in a field when Cushing came out and objected to the way his thirteen-year-old daughter Virginia was mopping the floor. He used the mop handle on the child, and when Mrs. Cushing came running in attacked her.

Urges $20,000,000 Waterway on Coast

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—General W. H. Bixby, chief of engineers, U. S. A., reported to Congress today favorably on a project to build an intercoastal waterway from Boston to Beaufort, N. C., at an expense to the government of $20,000,000. Bixby's plans call for a lock canal of twelve feet draft and ninety feet wide from the Delaware River to New York Harbor. Among the suggestions is one that the Chesapeake & Delaware canal in Pennsylvania be purchased by the government, enlarged and made a sea-level waterway. It is proposed that this State of New Jersey contribute $3,000,000 and the State of Pennsylvania $7,000,000 for the proposed waterway system. An initial appropriation of $100,000 with annual appropriation thereafter of $500,000 a year is urged.

Thinks Dead Flier Cody Was Bigamist

Stepmother of Aviator's American Wife Makes Claim.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Joseph Lee, stepmother of Maude M. Lee, who was married to Colonel Samuel F. Cody at Norristown, Pa., April 8, 1889, declares that from all appearances the famous aviator was a bigamist, having a wife and two children abroad while he was the husband of the former Maude Lee, who now is an inmate of the Norristown Insane Asylum. Cody was killed at Aldershot a few days ago and was buried with full military honors.

Mrs. Lee went to Norristown for the purpose of getting a transcript of the marriage certificate of her stepdaughter. She forwarded it to England for the purpose of proving the marriage. She will institute legal proceedings if necessary to obtain dower rights for the insane woman, whose condition is the result of a fall in a parachute drop in England while performing in a circus with Cody.

Model Refuses to Don Bare-Knee Suit

Eloise Brighton Often Posed in Nude, "But for Art."

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Miss Eloise Brighton, a pretty artist's model told interviewers today why she refused to don a "Buster Brown" bathing suit at the national style show last night, thereby causing a slight hitch in the proceedings.

"I understand," said Miss Brighton, "that I'm no prude. I've posed for a hundred pictures in the 'altogether,' but it was for the sake of art.

"But did you see the 'Buster Brown' suit? Well, I did, and I told the garment manufacturer that hired me, 'None of that in mine.' Do you suppose I was going to run around the ballroom down at Orchestra Hall with my bare knees exposed? Well, I should say not.

Aside from Miss Brighton's refusal the big show was pronounced a huge success by garment-makers today.

$25,000 Grain Store Fire in Belmont, N.H.

TILTON, N. H., Aug. 13.—Fire which destroyed Jeremiah Dearborn's grain store and elevator in Belmont early today threatened to sweep the village. Belmont is six miles from here on the Tilton & Belmont branch.

The flames spread to a house owned by Mrs. A. A. Smith and swept through it so rapidly that J. F. Godley, occupying the second floor, leaped from a second-floor window with his baby in his arms. Neither was hurt.

Men and women turned out to save surrounding houses. The women held hose lines with the men. After a hard fight they brought the fire under control at 7 o'clock.

The total loss is $25,000. The heaviest loser is Dearborn, who had $4,000 insurance on his elevator and stock, which were valued at a total of $21,000.

6 Busy Bats Upset Telephone Exchange

"Number, please," said a Malden telephone operator to an irate man on the wire.

"I want to know"—

"Number, please," cut in the girl, sternly.

"Aw, you're got bats in your belfry," growled the man.

The girl shrieked. A sure enough bat had flitted between her face and the switchboard. She looked around. The room was full of bats—six of them.

The three operators shrieked and screamed and squealed. A policeman and two wire inspectors arrived simultaneously. Three bats went out the window and three died the death.

Debutante Protests Veils at Newport

NEWPORT, Aug. 13.—Miss Elsie Stevens, one of the most beautiful of this season's debutantes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens, has rebelled against the innovation of lace veils that make the face of the wearer invisible. She appeared at the Casino wearing a long veil of white lace, covering but not concealing her features.

Boston Women Who Have Made Good

No. 20—ALICE PARKER LESSER

"When a woman makes a success as a lawyer she does so in the face of great difficulties and discouragements," is the statement of Attorney Alice Parker Lesser, and she speaks with the authority of one who has watched the profession grow as an occupation for women from the time when she was the only feminine legal light in the city of Boston to the present when there are more than half a hundred fellow women attorneys.

Mrs. Lesser says she believes that women not only have a place in the law, but she maintains they are leaders in a movement which is now becoming general among both men and women members of the bar. She said:

Preventive Law.

I have always stood for a practice that has for its ideal the prevention of litigation. The lawyer should be just as keen to keep his cases out of court as are the best modern physicians to keep the communities in which they practice from becoming diseased.

Preventive law is but a part of the great preventive doctrine which is taking possession of modern thought.

Although it is not quite the same with the law as it is with medicine, and the lawyers' ranks are increasing while the number of doctors is rapidly decreasing, the most progressive attorneys work with greater zeal to prevent trouble than they do to straighten it out after litigation has begun.

If I have made good in my profession, I am more proud of the cases I have succeeded in keeping from court than I am of any victories I may have won in the courtroom.

While I do not lay claim to credit for this change of front in the legal profession of Boston, and do not attribute their peace methods entirely to the presence of women lawyers, I do believe they have been in the vanguard and have been among the first to stand for such reform.

Suffrage Champion.

Mrs. Lesser is an ardent suffragist and a prominent member of many women's clubs. She holds that women lawyers will never be really as successful as they should be until they are economically and politically independent.

She concluded:

The law is a splendid profession for young women, and although they may not be able to succeed as independent attorneys they will be the better able to score successes in many positions where their legal knowledge is essential.

Mrs. Lesser attributes her success as a lawyer partly to the fact that when yet a young girl her father insisted upon arguing many questions with her and interesting her to take opposite sides from him.

In this way she developed a love for logic and analysis and laid the foundation for her future legal career.

Claims 40 Cancer Cures by X-Rays

HOBART, Tasmania, Aug. 13.—Using X-rays as a cure for cancer is the latest scientific exploit. Dr. Roberts, a noted scientist, declared today that forty cases of cancer had been effected by use of the Roentgen rays filtered through silver, copper or tin plate.

Woo Sing Forts Are Taken from Rebels

SHANGHAI, China, Aug. 13.—Government troops are showing no quarter to the Southern rebels. The forts at Woo-Sing were captured by the federals today and nearly all the rebel defenders were killed.

MOSES' KNEE FAMOUS, TOO, IT DEVELOPS

Where is the most beautiful knee in Boston?

If you know why Moses has horns, you will also know who has the most beautiful knee.

The horns controversy started when a small boy being conducted through the Boston Art Museum by Mrs. Mary Cronan asked—"Why has he got horns?" and pointed to Michael Angelo's statue of Moses.

What would you have answered? Mrs. Cronan confessed herself baffled.

Books were pored over, every chapter of the Old Testament has been searched and the most painstaking investigation has failed to look worn out the answer to the query. Meanwhile, "Whaddye hear from Moses?" has become a part of the slang of the day.

One thing was brought out, however, by the investigations. That thing was that Moses, according to the artists, has the most beautiful knee in sculpture.

DICK RUDOLPH MAY FACE CUBS IN THIRD GAME

The third setto of a series of five games between the Cubs and Pilgrims at the South End pasture this afternoon will probably witness the appearance of Dick Rudolph on the mound for the local team. Rudolph's showing on the last western trip was anything but impressive, as he only started in three games and won but one of these. However, the diminutive Gotham youngster is a much better pitcher on his home grounds—this is a known fact—and it is possible that today's game will see him return to form.

Manager Johnny Evers of the Windy City team may not play in the game this afternoon. He will probably draw a suspension of three days for his "run-in" with Umpire Al Orth on a poor decision early in the first game of the double-header yesterday, during which he was banished. He has not yet heard anything to this effect, however, and it is possible that Orth will be lenient with him. If Evers does not play Art Phelan will don the spangles and work at the second station.

The Pilgrims return home was certainly a welcomed event. A double win over such a scrappy aggregation as the Cubs and all in one afternoon is something to think about and it proves for once and all time that the aggressiveness and able management of George Stallings is needed on the bench. Had Stallings been with the team on the last trip away from home there is no doubt that the Pilgrims would have won more games than they did.

It is likely that Stallings will stick to his hit-and-run combination, Maranville and Myers. After a long run together earlier in the season, this pair was split up, but in the recent Pittsburgh series Stallings returned Myers to his former berth. It was not bad judgment either, for the dimensions of Maranville and Myers following one another undoubtedly prove a very puzzling problem to the opposing pitcher.

Revere Elks Hold Carnival Tonight

This will be Elks' night at the Revere cycle track. One of the biggest athletic carnivals offered in Revere since the palmy days of the sport at Oak Island will be on the card for the Elks and their numerous friends. The feature is a twenty-mile match race between George Wiley of Syracuse and Jimmy Moran of Chelsea.

They are even on special races. Moran recently defeated Wiley at Revere and Wiley evened scores with the Chelsea milkman in Philadelphia the other night. The "rubber" event is full of promise. Moran is confident that he will capture the special prize that the Elks have offered, while Wiley is certain that he will take the trophy home.

A special motor race between Jimmy Hunter and Carl Ruden for two miles should be an electrifying contest, for considerable rivalry exists between the men. Then there will be the usual number of sprint bike races between amateurs and professionals, and there will be two wrestling matches in which four of the best grapplers in this section will appear. Joe Jearardi, the Italian champion, and Young Burns, the Swedish champion, meet in the first chap, and Dan Fitzpatrick, the Irish giant, and Carl Hoffman, the rank of the Rhine.

This carnival is open to the public and is not exclusively for Elks, as some "fans" seem to think.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THE Pilgrims may not be exactly a pennant winning combination, but yesterday they would have been a fair match for the best team ever in baseball. Those two wins were no flukes, neither were they gifts, though Cheney's wildness in the first game and the generally poor defence of the Chicagoans in the second helped mightily to swell the Boston totals in both contests. The Pilgrims would have won anyway, the displays of their opponents only serving to make the victories more emphatic.

IN the first place, the Pilgrims showed a refreshing spirit of aggressiveness; they were up and at it all the time and the discouragements of the first few innings only added to the determination of their attack, an assault which put the latter team that the Cubs yesterday might well succumb under.

The Pilgrims were just a little bit ragged in the field themselves in the first part of the opening game, a near error accounting for the first inning tally of the Cubs and an actual one helping out a whole lot towards making the two runs scored by the Chicagoans in the fourth inning, despite the heroic three-base clout by Williams.

THAT the Cubs did not garner more from their activities in that round was due to the superior box work of Walter Dickson, who kept on pitching just as though nothing had happened. That he was still unduly removed from the struggle is no reflection whatever on the quality of his pitching, which was excellent. It is a safe bet Stallings will use him again in the present series, if he does not actually send him in today. Dickson only pitched four innings yesterday and will be perfectly able to take the race of the Cubs this afternoon if he is needed.

TO Hub Perdue, Dickson had a a worthy successor. The Gallatin Squash went into the fray after the score had been tied in the fifth and for two innings hat the Cubs feeding from his hand. He got into a bit of trouble in the eighth but was pulled through by his own pitching and a rather superior piece of fielding by Captain Bill Sweeney, who, though he did not make a bit in either of yesterday's games, put up some very fine defensive work in both battles. As the Pilgrims managed to gather four more runs in the sixth session Hub had a rather easy victory added to his present string.

MAYBE the pitching of Otto Hess discouraged them. It was enough to. The big portsider had about everything necessary and held the Cubs to five hits in nine innings. As at the same time the Pilgrims were battering the offerings of Jimmie Slack, late of Brooklyn, in the most approved style, Otto was not treated to his first really easy game of the year. He both has pursued the Dayton boy all year and he has not won very many games though he has pitched but few poor ones. Yesterday he had the breaks and got away with the game nicely and was batted hard in but one inning, the fifth, when the Cubs scored twice. The rest of the singles came singly and did no damage whatever. Lavender succeeded Slack on the mound in the fifth inning and stopped the Pilgrims, who up to that time had scored one or more times on every occasion they went to bat, for a time. But they made merry with Jimmy in the seventh and scored two runs just to prove that all pitchers were appearing apply much alike to them at the time.

Wins in Nineteen Holes.

MAPLEWOOD, N. H., Aug. 13.—A. Collins of Merion and L. P. Guyer of Siwanoy, both with Metropolitan handicaps of four, furnished the most exciting match in the handicap fourney. Nineteen holes were necessary before Collins defeated his opponent 1 up.

Fall River Games to Be Played at Salem

The New England game between Brockton and Fall River scheduled to be played in Fall River today will be played on the Bridge Street Grounds, in Salem. Billy Hamilton, the new Fall River manager, is of the opinion, it is said, that Salem is ripe for New England League baseball and the game today will be in the nature of a tryout.

Manager Hamilton is satisfied that Fall River is not the baseball city it used to be.

Brooklyn Sends Erwin to Toronto

BROOKLYN, Aug. 13.—The Brooklyn club has unconditionally released Outfielder Scheer. Catcher Erwin was sent to Toronto. The club has exercised its claim on Outfielder Hub Northern of Toronto and relinquished claims on Pitcher Schardt of Indianapolis. Pitcher Frank Allen of Brooklyn is confined to his bed with an attack of pneumonia poisoning.

Harrington Reports to Cincinnati Reds

Frank Harrington of the pitching staff of the Lynn New England League club, who was sold to the Cincinnati Nationals two weeks ago, has reported to Manager Tinker, if he obeyed the orders of Manager Flaherty. In addition to the purchase price of $4,000, paid by Cincinnati, a bonus of $1,000 was paid for the delivery of Harrington prior to the end of the New England League season.

20 Scoreless Innings Diamond Record

Toronto—
0000000000000000000

Jersey City—
0000000000000000000

JERSEY CITY, Aug. 13.—A new baseball record was made at West Side Park yesterday when the Jersey City team and the Torontos of the Eastern League went twenty innings without a score. The previous record for a no-score game was made in 1910 at Oakland, Cal., when "Rubber" Knapp twirled eighteen innings for Portland without a tally.

Hearne, who pitched for Toronto yesterday, went the entire twenty innings. He allowed but six hits. Until the ninth inning only one member of the opposition obtained a safety.

Thompson pitched thirteen innings for Jersey City and was succeeded by Brandon.

Caldwell Ordered to Pay Vaughn $16

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 13.—The National Baseball Commission has restored the Kenosha club of the Central Association to good standing, the club having paid an award of $150 to player R. A. Madigan. Player James Vaughn complained that Ray Caldwell, of the New York American League club, refused to pay a loan of $16 which he alleged was borrowed from him by Caldwell in the Spring of 1912. The commission held that Caldwell had made no defense after a copy of the petition had been forwarded to him, and declared Caldwell ineligible to play unless the debt is settled through the office of the New York club within five days of the finding.

NEW YORK Y. C. FLEET ON RUN TO GLOUCESTER

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 13.—The New York Club fleet, which is anchored in this harbor, was awake early this morning, after a most strenuous night afloat and ashore.

The racing end of Commodore Dallas B. Pratt's fleet that rounded Cape Cod for the first time in four or five years, was astir at daybreak, getting the boats into racing condition for the rest of the week.

The fleet starts today on a racing run to Gloucester for the Navy cups, and on Thursday will race back from Gloucester to this port for the Alumni cups.

Friday the 50-footers, the new class that has been so successfully raced on Long Island Sound, will start in a special race for a trophy offered by S. Reed Anthony of the Eastern Club.

The run yesterday up from Provincetown was not wholly successful, when it came to a racing proposition, and the wind, which died out before the big schooners had hardly gotten under way, kept the fleet broken up until well into the evening.

Harbor Beautifully Decorated.

J. Pierpont Morgan's famous old steamer Corsair came into the harbor just long enough to fire the usual salute to the flagship Sea Fox, and then steamed over to Beverly, where the guests on board, including J. P. Morgan, the owner, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Satterlee of New York, who are summering there. Mrs. Satterlee was the daughter of the owner.

All Marblehead is decorated in honor of the New York visitors, and the trains and automobiles are bringing into town hundreds of visitors who are out to witness not only some good yacht racing in the next few days, but an unusual sight in the harbor here.

It has been some years since such an array of pleasure craft of all descriptions have anchored in the harbor, and the total money valuation of all these yachts would pass the million dollar mark several times over.

Gallant Knocks Out Ketchell at Arena

Brown and Shubert Fight Draw, While Delmont Stops Muncie in Other Bouts

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE was plenty of action in the three star bouts at the Atlas A. A. last night. Johnny Gallant of Chelsea presented Al Ketchell, Bridgeport's "coming lightweight champion," with a round trip ticket to Dreamland in the second round of their bout. Mickey Brown, the popular Little Malden bantamweight, fought a spirited ten-round draw with Al Shubert of New Bedford, while our old friend Al Delmont outclassed Johnnie Munice, the pride of Charlestown, Referee Jack Sheehan stopping the uneven contest in the ninth round.

The Gallant-Ketchell fight was a slashing affair while it lasted. Ketchell came to Boston with a record of victories a yard long. He has fought many of the "headliners" in the lightweight division, and the wise men passed the word along the Rialto that he would vanquish Le rugged Chelsea lad.

The Bridgeport favorite performed well in the first session, when he scored several effective blows with his left hand. Gallant made several attempts to land a right-hand "clincher," but Ketchell danced merrily out of harm's way each time.

The men continued to fight at a lively pace in the second stanza. The "fans" were with Gallant almost to a man, but many of them were of the opinion that Ketchell would prove too fast for him.

KNOCKOUT WAS SUDDEN.

JOHNNY kept forcing the fight.

He finally got Ketchell cornered and, like a flash, hooked his left to Al's jaw. The blow did not travel over six inches, and Ketchell fell back against the ropes. Gallant did not waste any time in crossing his right to his opponent's jaw. That ended the bout.

Ketchell's feet gave way under him and he fell backward on the ropes. He threw up his arms and caught hold of the ropes. He made no attempt to get up, as he was completely dazed, and evidently thought that the roof of the Arena building had dropped on him.

All of which goes to prove that our best little fighters will take a rest on the canvas if they are hit hard enough and on the right spot.

BROWN AND SHUBERT DRAW.

THE bout between Mickey Brown and Al Shubert was a whirlwind affair. It was the fastest contest between little men staged in this city since Johnny Kilbane and Jimmy Walsh fought here.

Brown possessed all of his dazzling speed and boxed like a veteran. But he was not pitted against a slow boxer like McGovern. Shubert is almost as fast as Brown, and is a harder puncher.

The honors were pretty even at the end of the tenth round, and the majority of the "fans" were pleased when Referee Jimmy Flaherty called the "go" a draw. Brown had a slight shade on the lad from the Whaling City, but the margin in his favor was not big enough to entitle him to the decision.

SHUBERT IS HARD PUNCHER.

THE boys started boxing at top speed in the first round. The Malden youngster relied upon a left jab his speed footwork in order to keep Shubert at bay. The latter, however, is a regular fighter, and kept boring in, and when he got at close quarters he scored repeatedly with short right and left hand jolts to the head and body.

The two bantams continued to fight like champions for nine rounds. When the tenth session opened, there was little to choose between the two boys. Both of them started to fight their hardest in the last round.

Shubert tried to land left and right hand swings, but Brown was a little bit too fast for him, and either danced merrily around the ring or beat Shubert to the punch. Mickey had the best of the fighting in this round, but it would have been an injustice to Shubert to have rendered a decision against him. He was the aggressor in most rounds, and his blows were all solid smashes.

DELMONT WINS "GRUDGE" FIGHT.

THE opening bout of the evening was a "grudge" fight. It was between Al Delmont and Johnny Muncie. Muncie put up a game battle, but was no match for the battle scarred Delmont. The Charlestown boy was on the receiving end of many hard wallops, and the referee intervened and halted hostilities in the ninth chapter. Muncie might have lasted the ten rounds, but it would have been foolish to have permitted such a one-sided bout to continue.

AL IS NOT ALL IN.

DELMONT put up a good fight and displayed some of his old-time cleverness. Al is far from being all in. He feinted in perfect style, and his varied attacks kept Muncie worried.

Al, however, failed to startle as by his footwork. He did very little jumping around, and it looks as though his legs have gone back on him.

White Falls Victim to Speed of Dundee

VERNON, Cal., Aug. 13.—Johnnie Dundee, the New York featherweight, knocked out Jack White of Chicago in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round bout. Dundee led in every round.

Dundee's speed dazzled White from the start. He floored the Chicago boy in the third round and in the sixth. Both times White came up promptly, only to take savage punishment. In the fourth White showed a slight flash of form. A left hook, cleanly planted, sent the Chicago boxer to the canvas in the ninth. Referee Eton immediately raised the New York man's arm, while White tried to regain his feet. There was no count.

Negro Teams Even.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—The Lincoln Giants of New York won the first game, 3 to 2, and lost the second, 4 to 3, in the thirteenth game with the Chicago American Giants for the negro championship.

BASEBALL CHATTER

No games were scheduled in the American League today, the Eastern teams being enroute for the West.

The Pirates got enough scores in the first inning to defeat the Reds.

* * *

Harry Covaleski, who gained the sobriquet of "The Giant Killer," because of his ability to put the jinx on New York, has been purchased by the Detroit Tigers.

* * *

George Clark, the southpaw purchased by Clark Griffith from Manager Chance of the New York Yanks, has been sent back to the Atlanta, Ga., club because of his wildness.

* * *

Pitcher McHale, purchased by Frank Chance from the Jersey City club, went West with the Yankees and will be used on the present tour.

Frank Kramer Wins International Sprint

Frank Kramer, the world's champion bike sprinter, again proved himself worthy of the crown he wears, when he defeated a classy field of riders composed of Jackie Clarke, Frank Cavanagh and Allessio Stefani, at the Revere Cycle Track. He beat Cavanagh easily in a match heat, but Clarke gave him some trouble in the final race, in which all four riders competed, the East Orange man succeeded in nosing out Cavanagh at the tape, after a wild sprint. Clarke was third, and Stefani fourth.

The motor-paced race of two ten-mile heats was won by Julien Rodolphe of France, who was scratched with the veteran Jimmy Moran. Put Logan won the two-mile lap race, professional, with McPartland second, and Dennis Connolly third. The three-quarter mile professional handicap race went to McFarland. Cutter was second, and Jackson third. The amateur races were well contested, Tom Connolly winning the mile event, and Herbert the five-mile.

The Tunnel

GREATEST STORY of the Kind Since JULES VERNE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

OVER two hundred miles out under the ocean, three thousand men are at work pushing a great tunnel out under the Atlantic, the most gigantic engineering scheme ever conceived by the brain of man. Rives, the chief engineer of the new work, has just arrived on the scene, after a trip from shore in a tunnel train running over a hundred miles an hour. Suddenly there is an explosion and men and machinery are swept backward by a tremendous blast. Then follows a scene of horror. Rives and a few survivors stumble on foot away from the disaster, and after hours they come into view of faint lights at main station No. 4.

A train is standing there, but just as the leaders of the survivors reach the steps of the rear car, the train slides out into the tunnel and leaves them screaming and cursing and running in the dark.

The story then goes back to the beginning of the great project. A score of financiers are gathered on the roof of the fifty-two-story Hotel Atlantic, called together by the summons of Lloyd, the master man of money. There, introduced by Rives, McKendree Allan, the inventor, tells them of his great plan to tunnel the Atlantic. "My tunnel," he says, "is going to be about 3,100 miles long."

After the meeting Allan tells Rives that he is going to make him chief engineer of the tunnel and lets him in on a plan to make millions by buying up real estate at the sites of the tunnel entrances. The tunnel scheme creates the greatest excitement in the financial world.

The tunnel city is built on the Jersey plains and work is pushed at top speed. Twenty thousand men, with great dredges, push down into the bowels of the earth. Similar scenes are being enacte at Bermuda, Fayal, at Finisterre and on a great plain beyond London. Allan is the moving spirit everywhere. He is almost never at home in Tunnel City, and his wife tells Rives how deeply she is hurt.

The biggest man in the New York Real Estate Exchange comes to Tunnel City and tries to beat Allan down on the price at which he is holding his land.

Now Go on with the Story

(From the German of Bernhard Kellermann—German version. Copyrighted, 1913, by S. Fischer, Verlag, Berlin. English translation and compilation by

@ Waterbury

(The German version of this story is appearing in the German Journal.)

Copyrighted, 1913, by International News Service.)

"Fear!" echoed Allan, dumfounded.

"WHAT do you think?" inquired Rives, after the boss of the real estate brokers had departed.

"Think!" snorted Allan. "I think he'll get on the band-wagon or be run over. They have probably framed it to stay out of the market and bring my price down, but they can't win at that game. The land is worth every cent and more than we are asking for it and it's bound to sell whether they want it to or not."

Rives switched the conversation over to other matters connected with construction and some changes he contemplated making in the personnel of his staff. Allan signed telegrams, answered phone calls and advised and suggested in between breaths for about an hour. Then Rives announced that he would have to start back.

"I want to take you with me," he said. "To Tunnel City?"

"Yes," replied his friend gravely. "I told Maud I'd bring you back with me tonight if I had to do it by force."

Allan frowned slightly at his piled up desk, looked at his watch and then up at Rives.

"Can you wait about fifteen minutes? Guess I'd better go, though I haven't got time. You can have me motored back so as to get here by seven-thirty in the morning."

"It'll be easy—you or a special train."

"All right, then," agreed Allan, with hesitation, his eyes still on his desk. "I haven't seen Maud and the little one for a month, it seems to me. But I certainly hate to leave this pile of work! Well, I'—

The phone rang. He answered it, and winked at Rives as he caught the first few words.

"Certainly. Come right along," he said. "It's Murie," he laughed triumphantly. "He has been commissioned to buy a thousand feet of wharf front for the Trans-oceanic people. What did I tell you? Oh," he exclaimed as he hung up the receiver, "he's still standing. "I told him to come along. It'll probably be an hour or so of a job, and others are likely to come through, so I better not try to go with you."

"And Maud?"

"Well," hesitated Allan, "you explain it to her, old man. She'll understand; and tell her I'll be down in a few days at the latest."

Rives looked at him curiously and in silence for a few moments.

"All right," he said quietly. "So long!"

If you have no engagements made for next Sunday go to Paragon Park, Nantasket, and search for "The Tunnels." $500 is the total cash value of "The Tunnels," and it is yours if you go to Paragon Park next Sunday between 10 a. m and 6 p. m. and join in the hunt for the precious "tunnels."

Raising $3,000,000,000.

AND now a new power was felt in the affairs of the great tunnel project. To the world at large Allan was still the big figure, the tremendous force that brought forth the mighty plan and was driving it ahead. But those back of the scenes felt a new hand on the controlling levers. This new power was Money and its tangible form was Sidney Wolf.

This man was Lloyd's other self. But a few years before he had been obscure. Then he found himself across the board from the terrible money-vulture in a minor chess-game of finance and had played his hardest. Lloyd admired his skill and made him his chief of staff.

His name originally had been Salomon Wolfsohn, in his team days in Berlin. Moving to London in increasing prosperity, he had become Sidney Wolfson, and in New York he had finally appeared as Sidney Wolf. He was not a genius of finance. He was a master general of dollars, which is a different thing. As Allan knew the working capacity of a drill, so this man knew the working capacity of a dollar. He could not dream great visions of finance, but when shown the field of a campaign and placed at the head of millions he was an invincible fighter.

From a dog-poor student Wolf had become a multi-millionaire while still a comparatively young man. He had made money his one aim, and was bitterly disappointed when he found out that its possession was not the recipe for content. He was black-haired, thick-lipped and a trifle stout, with fishy eyes and a heavy voice—the type of man particularly repulsive to the men with whom he most desired to associate. He hated Allan, not because Allan under-rated his ability or lacked respect for his money skill, but because in all the months of their association in the planning of the financial campaign Allan had never treated him as a social acquaintance. He had never asked him to lunch or dinner; he had never introduced him to Mrs. Allan or intimated that he might be desirable as a guest at his home even in a vague, now committs) way. Rives treated him with formal politeness, and Allan's other acquaintances ignored him.

Allan, half-fellow-well-met, with half the underlings about the offices of the tunnel company, invariably addressed the money master as "Mr. Wolf." The "Mr." grated every time Wolf heard it, for he knew it was not a mark of respect. He resented Allan's familiarity with the others, a familiarity that never lessened their respect for him or the promptness of their obedience. Wolf was obeyed with cold precision, Allan with cheerful alacrity.

With this type of man hatred finds its expression in only one direction—an assault on the pocketbook. His first trick against the engineer was so adroitly planned and executed that Allan and Rives were forced to admit the justice of the result, though it mulcted them of a large share of their profits in the real estate transaction. Wolf sold the rights to all mineral deposits produced in the course of the Pittsburgh Subterranean Shelterless Corporation for $50,000,000. He then represented, as indeed Allan had planned, that the waste could be made into real estate along the coast front, and the directors, speaking through Lloyd, endorsed the plan, the proceeds to go to the common treasury. To avoid being cut off, Allan was forced to let his own holdings go into the common pool, in which he had only a minor share and Rives none at all.

In the meantime Wolf perfected the plans for floating the stock. The company was capitalized at $15,000,000,000 and it was decided that the first issue should call for $5,000,000,000 at the par value of the stock—also that it should not be sold for less than par. Allan and Wolf agreed that no more money could be safely demanded of the public until the tunnel building showed progress to about the half way mark. It might be necessary to do some juggling with the engineering and financing, but the two men felt equal to it.

Details of a stock market campaign are of interest only to the expert. Briefly, Wolf arranged for subscription at par in the sum of $125,000,000 to start the ball rolling when the stock should appear on the market.

The ball rolled. Shares were $1,000 each, but by an ingenious arrangement of certificates which Wolf devised, any one could buy an interest in a share for $10. Allan mainly conducted the advertising campaign, and under his skilful guidance, aided by suggestions from Wolf, the dollars came out of the forgotten corners. "A thousand dollars now will make you rich in old age"—this was the bait that drew the bank accounts. From every quarter of the globe a little stream of dollars hesied, Solomon with others and sweeping down in a roaring flood on the offices of the Tunnel Company. Day after day, and week after week the golden torrent swelled and grew, and as fast as it came Wolf devised means to put it to work where each dollar of the millions might earn a few cents before it was swallowed up in the hole that Allan was driving through the heart of the earth.

"It's wonderful," the latter told Rives, enthusiastically. "You can't believe now well the world understands what this thing means and how certain it is!"

"My dear chap," returned Rives, with a cynical little laugh, "you're on the wrong track altogether."

"What do you mean," demanded the engineer.

They were sitting on the veranda of the house at Tunnel City, overlooking the sea, where the whitecaps glistened and gleamed in the moonlight. Rives looked out across the heaving waste and laughed again.

"You engineers are supposed to study forces, but in this you have ignored the greatest force in the world."

"What is that?"

"Fear!"

"I don't get you at all."

Safe Hints

An excellent lotion for whitening and softening the hands is made of equal parts of pure olive oil and glycerine, beaten together and perfumed with oil of violets. Where glycerine is objected to, a paste made of two ounces of beeswax and one ounce of sweet almonds may be used instead of the lotion. Place the ingredients in a jar in a saucepan of boiling water and let them melt together. Stir until well mixed and when cold put the paste and apply it as often as necessary to the hands or smear it over the sleeping gloves.

The easiest and quickest way of cleaning paint is to have two pails of water, one cold, to which a tablespoonful of ammonia has been added, and one hot, with the addition of a little ammonia and soap powder. With a soft flannel wash the paint with the soapy water, then rinse with the cold water, using a fresh leather instead of the flannel, and wring the leather fairly dry. Paint washed like this dries with a nice polish which no using of hot water alone will impart.

Handkerchiefs and white clothes that have become yellow may be whitened in the following simple manner: After they have been washed in the usual way, lay them to soak over night in clear water, into which cream of tartar has been put. A teaspoonful to a quart of water is the right proportion. When ironed they will be as white as snow.

Copper kettles soon become discolored when they have been in use for any length of time. Try cleaning them in the following way, and you will get a beautiful polish. Dip a piece of lemon and in New York he had finally appeared as Sidney Wolf. He was not a rind into a little salt, and rub this well all over the surface of the kettle. Wipe it quickly off and polish with a dry chamois leather.

To render dustbins perfectly sanitary, burn a couple of newspapers or two or three handfuls of straw in them each time they are emptied. Let the flame pass out, and it will remove every trace of grease or damp from the iron and render the dustbin as healthy as a new one, and quite free from any unpleasant smell.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription, othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove those homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any of the Rikker-Jaynes drug stores and apply a little wet it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katherine Green.

THIS mother was a very attractive woman of the gentle, retiring type, whose melancholy eyes told of a life of mingled love and sorrow. Her daughter, who had appeared to idolise her, sacrificed everything to her comfort, and it was mainly on account of this mother's ill health that Mildred worked so hard at a trade manifestly beneath her capacity and breeding. For Mrs. Farley had been brought up in luxury and had many wants which could only be satisfied by means greater than those usually acquired by a young girl in Mildred's position. But work and self-denial will do much, and Mrs. Farley never had any reason to complain. Nor with her death had Mildred's exertions ceased. Though the necessity for such severe labor seemed to be past, she had shown no disposition to indulge herself. From early morning till late at night she had sat at her work, finishing one beautiful dress after another till Mrs. Olney was fain to believe that she had some new object in view and would ere long unite her fortunes with those of her fellow-boarder, the doctor.

But though the young people were to all appearance very good friends, meeting constantly at table and frequently in the parlors as well, the anxious landlady was soon assured by the physician's abstracted and reticent air, and, as she thought, by Mildred's uniform look of indifference, that her fond desire was not to be realized. When, therefore, Mildred informed her one morning that she was going away for a little visit, the good woman never thought of the doctor in connection with her departure, nor did she then or afterward harbor any suspicion that he bright young boarder was contemplating marriage with any one, least of all with him. If this busy girl had broken in upon her usual habits, he had not; nor was there anything in his bearing or conversation to lead her to suppose that he meditated any change in his mode of life.

The news of their proposed marriage with the tragic developments which had immediately caused and therefore awakened in the whole household the greatest feeling of surprise; nor could Mrs. Olney, for one, realize that the young and blooming girl upon whom the labor and sorrows of the last few months had left scarcely a trace and succumbed in a moment to the temptation of suicide, was neither by what sickness she had been seized.

"I know that folks are taken dreadful sudden sometimes," the old lady remarked at this juncture. "But I cannot reconcile such an end with what I knew of Mildred. It isn't in keeping with her character. If she had loved the doctor more or hated him more I could perhaps have understood it. But she was healthy in body and soul, a frank, young hopeful girl, and I don't see—" She said no more but her lips took a grim line and Mr. Gryce perceived that his suspicions, vague as they were, were not altogether unshared by this warm hearted woman and true friend of Mildred Farley.

He therefore started with good hope upon a line of questions by which he expected to reach some clue that would help him to the end he felt surer than saw before him. But though his skill was great the result was meagre, and after a lengthened conversation the only facts he thought worth recording in his mind were these:

THE EXAMINATION

That there had certainly been something peculiar in the young girl's actions of late; a certain reticence about her work for instance, such as she had never before displayed. Though she had made several handsome dresses during the last month up to the scraps lying on her room sufficiently testified, she had never shown them to her landlady as she had previously been accustomed to do, but kept herself and them locked up in her room till the time came for taking them home. And yet these dresses were certainly for other people and not for herself, she having been seen carrying them out in a great box many times during the four weeks she had kept herself such a prisoner.

That the person for whom they were destined was rich, for she came several times to be fitted, and always in a carriage.

That the place to which Mildred had gone on a visit was not known to her landlady, nor as far as could be learned, to any one else in the house.

That Mildred was invariably well and had never to all appearance stood in need of a doctor's prescription.

That Dr. Molesworth had been Mrs. Farley's physician and in this way seen much of the daughter. But that he had never appeared to take advantage of this fact, nor could Mrs. Olney recall the least token of an existing affection between them. If lovers, they had been very circumspect, too circumspect as it now appeared; such seeming indifference could cover nothing good.

That contrary to their usual open relations they had been seen just once whispering together on the stairs. But even then it was not as lovers whisper, rather like persons who have some business to settle.

That no one in the house ever linked their names together in speaking of them; nor were they ever the subject of jokes among the boarders.

A NEW CLUE

A poor array of seemingly unproductive facts, it is true; but Mr. Gryce was not discouraged. It was from some chance word or petty revelation he expected his clue, not from the open details which every one knew.

His next interview was with the woman who had come with the coroner and whom he, as well as Harrison, recognized for an expert female detective. She had taken Mrs. Olney's place beside the dead girl, and from her he hoped to gather a fact about which he was very anxious.

"Well, Mrs. Roberts," he exclaimed upon seeing her, "did you get the Miss I sent you?"

"I did, sir."

"And what have you to say?"

"That you are all right. There is a mark of fresh paint on the back of her gown between the shoulder-blades."

Mr. Gryce drew a deep breath expressive of great satisfaction. "I thought so," he cried. "And what was its color, Mrs. Roberts; is a shade, mind?"

"As near as I could judge in the light I had, it was brown, but of a very bright and peculiar tint."

ONE AGAINST HIGGINS

Higgins is troubled with an overweening curiosity about other people's affairs. Occasionally he gets taken down, however. He met Smithers in an omnibus. They have not now been very well, but be "my boys" him as if he were a lifelong friend.

"Been buying, eh?" he inquired at once.

"Yes," said Smithers, deliberately. "I've been looking after a horse for my wife."

"Have, eh? Well, let me look him over for you."

"Oh, I've bought him."

"Not without trying him? Was he sound?"

"He appeared to be."

"Doesn't shy?"

"No, certainly not."

"Good mouth?"

"Y-es; I think so."

"Good manners?"

But Smithers arrived at his crossing. When he reached the door of the bus he called back to Higgins:

"I neglected to mention the kind of horse my wife wanted. It was a clothes-horse."

His Toast.

At the close of the wedding breakfast, a gentleman noted for the length of toast rose, causing keen anxiety to the bridegroom, who knew his failing.

"Ladies and Gentlemen," he cried genially. "I propose the health of the bridegroom. May he see many days like this."

Confessions of a Medium

(Hypnotizing the Hypnotist)

Being an Expose of Frauds Practised by Self-Styled Spiritualists, Clairvoyants, Etc.

THE YOUNG LADY NOW AROSE AT MY BIDDING, AND I EXCITEDLY THREW MY HANDS BEFORE HER EYES, RUBBED MY THUMBS ON HER TEMPLES, SPOKE QUICKLY AND FORCIBLY TO HER, LOOKING FEARFULLY WAY DOWN DEEP IN HER EYES. "SLEEP," I SAID, "SLEEP. YOU FEEL YOUR EYES GETTING HEAVIER AND HEAVIER. YOUR HEAD NODS. YOU ARE SO VERY DROWSY. I WILL SUPPORT YOU TO THIS CHAIR. REST NOW. SLEEPY AND SLEEPIER—YOU ARE SO VERY, VERY SLEEPY. YOU ARE ASLEEP!" HER HEAD DROPPED BACK AND SHE BREATHED LIKE ONE IN A DEEP SLUMBER.

By CHARLES D. ISAACSON.

Copyright, 1912, by International News Service.

We will call the man Milton Jones. You know him well by a far different name, which has often appeared on the billboards. College men have listened to his scientific lectures. He has been the friend of noted psychologists and mind experts. He has written books and conducted courses in hypnotism and helped medical men in peculiar, obstinate cases. He has often gone after "bad" boys for church purposes. His big, masterful eyes have stared out in black, silhouetted pictures in many a magazine advertisement, but there his name did not appear.

I am telling you all this about him because I want you to realize the important position he occupies in scientific circles. Then when I show you what I did to him you will understand why I beg you to "steer clear." There is a crew who are enlisting hundreds of romantic, ambitious people of their earnings, making them believe they are getting a course in hypnotism.

Mr. Jones once asked me to be his "subject." A subject is a person perfectly willing to be made ridiculous before an audience, for their amusement and the hypnotist's fame and profit. For the sake of experiment I consented to his proposal.

"Very fine," said Mr. Jones, "only there are several things I must tell you beforehand, in strict confidence."

"But I thought you were going to hypnotize me," I began.

A CONFESSION

"I am going to try to," he interrupted. "But sometimes my experiments do not work out just as I wish them to. Then you must pretend that I have you under my will, and do just as I say anyway—you see?"

"But I thought you told your audience that your subjects are hypnotized," I argued.

"I do, but don't you understand?" he asked, getting impatient.

"No, I don't," I retorted stubbornly.

Well, we didn't get much further. Insomuch as I wanted to try out a scheme I had in mind, however, I pretended to be overwhelmed by his argument and finally consented to assist him.

"The first sitting was held privately before a number of his friends. When Jones—now "Professor" Jones—said: "Will any ladies or gentlemen volunteer to come up here and permit me to mesmerize them?" I found I was not the only subject.

About seven men responded. Then Mr. Jones proceeded with his work. Strange mesmeric passes before the eyes of all six subjects were made, and soon he had them under control. It was at the juncture when things were growing most exciting that I slipped, unobserved, into an adjoining room. I attached a bath spray to a faucet, gently playing a fine stream of water on the faces of the "hypnotized" subjects.

A man "flashing" with a penknife began to rub his nose and stare about. Another whose neck was "stiff" suddenly found he could move it with alacrity. A fellow who couldn't shut his mouth didn't wait to swallow much of the water before he closed his jaws with a snap. One of the subjects was supposed to be unable to rise from the floor, but the liquid showed very soon how powerless he was. One who couldn't stop repeating "My name is Mary Smith—my name is Mary Smith" ceased to gurgle. It was curious to watch the men immediately regain their senses, and my dear friend, "Professor" Jones, became very much embarrassed.

It was a little after this that I regained the confidence and good will of Mr. Jones sufficiently for him to wet-look my little "joke." He explained—to his own satisfaction—that the sudden shock had aroused the subject from his hypnotic trance, he being still unable to realize that I didn't believe they had ever been unconscious.

HIS DEBUT

Nevertheless, some months later Mr. Jones received an invitation to attend a private experiment arranged for my initial debut as a full-fledged hypnotist. I myself personally wrote Mr. Jones, saying that I had at last become fully convinced of the truth of his performances and had succeeded in partially accomplishing some of his lesser wonders.

Mr. Jones was the guest of honor. He was introduced as the great and renowned scientist of two hemispheres, to which he replied with a short speech, in which he told us how proud he was to be with such a bright and intelligent audience, etc., etc.

I bowed. After a short preliminary talk I announced that I would be absent in the first test by a young lady. Would she kindly step up? She came, very pretty and blushing. Would the pianist kindly strike a chord, for her to sing by? He did, but her response was terrible. Off key, rasping, nunsical—it sounded like a fog horn in distress. Would the pianist please try again? But this time everything was worse and the people began to shift in their seats.

The young lady was motioned to a place, where she sat down.

"Mr. Haverman has a few words to say regarding my assistant," I announced, and a gentleman arose to tell how utterly voiceless the lady was, and Mr. Remington corroborated what he said, and Miss Lembier vouched for every word that Mr. R. had spoken—although the audience as a whole did not need much evidence along that line.

The young lady now arose at my bidding and I excitedly threw my hands before her eyes, rubbed my thumbs on her temples, spoke quickly and forcibly at her, looking fearfully way down deep in her eyes.

"Sleep," I said, "sleep. You feel your eyes getting heavier and heavier. Your head nods. You are so very drowsy. I will support you to this chair. Rest now. Sleepy and sleepier—you are so very, very sleepy. You are asleep!"

Her head dropped back and she breathed like one in a deep slumber.

"Rise." I went on, "you are now asleep and yet awake—to do my bidding. Do you understand? You are to sing, you understand? You are to sing sweetly and feelingly and in perfect time and perfect time. You understand? The pianist will play the accompaniment of "The Holy City" and you will join him. Now!"

To the wonder of the audience, and particularly Professor Jones, she feebly rose. Forth from her throat came a thrilling gush of full-voiced sweetness. Like a Patti or a Melba, the girl gave us song after song of melting melody.

Then I passed my hands before her eyes again and cried: "Awake! awake!" as she was in the middle of a note. And the voice cracked and broke and fell into discordant chaos.

Mr. Milton Jones shook my hand enthusiastically. It was so easy to fake a fake. The girl was in my scheme to hypnotize the hypnotist!

Obstinate Acne Quickly Yields

Fine Remedy that Clears Skin of Pimples on Cheeks, Temples, Sides of Nose and Chin.

Acne attacks the glandular structures of the skin, more particularly those tiny glands that secrete fat.

And it is here that S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, is most active in its influence.

There is one ingredient in S. S. S. the purpose of which is to so stimulate the cells in the tissues that they select from the blood the nutriment that makes new skin and thus eliminates all irritants, acids and parasites that inflame the glands. There is a natural tendency of the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to throw off impurities, but where a persistent inflammatory process has invaded the skin, the natural repair work of the blood is interfered with; it requires the stimulating activity of S. S. S. to overcome such morbid conditions. If you have been troubled with acne, do not despair of a cure.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it, the great Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept. The Swift Specific Company, 121 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

She was hurriedly adjusting her veil, and had but a few moments in which to catch her car.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I SEE in the papers that the Prince of Wales got a call down from King George for indorsing a note and getting stung for $2,500," said the Head Barber.

"That's nothing," said the Manicure Lady. "Lots of princes has got stung for indorsing notes, and they wasn't all princes of royal blood, either. I seen that same piece in the paper, but it was quite a while ago. Gee, George, I'll bet he felt awful when the King of England bawled him out. A king's anger must be terrible to behold. That's what the historical novels tells, anyhow."

"I don't see how a king can be any madder at his son for monkeying with indorsed notes than any dad is with his boy," said the Head Barber. "A man can only get about so mad without getting apoplexy. A king can't call you down no harder than Paddy the Pig. There is only so many words in the English language, and a roughneck can say them as loud and as often as a king."

"Yes, there is a good deal in that," agreed the Manicure Lady. "You remember when I lost my purse last week, George. I was just as mad as a human being could be when I seen I had lost it. No king could have been madder. I could have bit the head off anybody that said I had misplaced it, until I found it and knew I had been careless. Oh, well, what is money anyhow? Why should the King of England be sore at his son? The kid's grandfather was the same sort of a sport. He was more than a king, George, that Edward man. He was a regular guy. He knew more about the value of money than people think he did. He knew so much about the value of money that he knew it didn't have no great value at all. He had friends that was rich and friends that was poor, and would stick to a friend that was poor just as surely as he would walk away from a pest that was rich.

"Wilfred says that he would have did the same as the young Prince of Wales did, only it wouldn't do the poor kid no good to endorse a $2,500 note. It makes an awful difference whose name is on the back of a piece of paper, George, it ain't the color of the ink or the penmanship or the pen it was wrote with. But I didn't have the heart to tell Wilfred that he would never be able to endorse a note, and I guess he don't care much for what little money he ever made, except to be happy with it. He wrote a poem yesterday and sent it to a magazine and this is the copy of it:

"I do not care for boundless wealth
Or anything it brings to me.
Just so long as I have my good health
And every songbird sings to me.
The richest brewer in the land
Is only rich in gold and silver.
And I, who have friends as every hand,
My love all gold I would not kill for."

"Wilfred said that he knew 'silver' and 'kill for' was a bum rhyme, but he explained to me that that was what no real rhyme to 'silver' and I suppose the magazine editor will let it go at that. Anyhow, these sentiments of his is about the same as mine. I don't know how much money Edward the Seventh had when he died, and I don't care, but there is a lot of people in the world that was made happier when he was born, and he will talked about as a regular man just as long as he is talked about as a good king. I'm afraid his son ain't much like him, with all his court doings and pomp, but I am glad to know his grandson is a 'regular fellow.'"

"Here, too," said the Head Barber. "I wish someone would endorse a note for me. The landlord is barking like a hound."

AN ADVERTISING TALE

It was the usual rendezvous, the smoking room at the Blue Dragon; and gathered together there was the usual crowd—knights of the road, all of them; and between them they "traveled" in almost every conceivable commodity, from biscuits to hairpins.

The conversation, as conversation among such men is apt to, drifted round the subject of advertising, and wondrous, amazing tales were told concerning the gentle art of "pushing" sales before the young man from America chimed in, and capped the lot.

"It was last Winter," he began, in his confident, persuasive voice, "in bitterly cold day, over in Chicago—losing frozen in the country. I stopped into a second-hand clothes shop, and bought a muffler. As I unfolded the thing, a packet fell out, containing a photograph and a note.

"Now, that photograph was a portrait of the most beautiful girl I've ever dreamed of. Believe me the note gave her name and address, and said, 'If you are single, please write to me, I sent off a letter forthwith.

"Three days later I received a reply; 'Sir, Mary Smith to whom you wrote was my grandmother. She died nine years ago, aged eighty-six. Yours truly.'

"That, dealer, you know, gentlemen, concluded the young man from America, with a wistful sigh, 'never advertised. Nearly broke my heart, he did!"

His Bob?

"How is your friend doing out West?"

"Oh, he's carrying everything before him."

"What business is he in?"

"He's a waiter in a restaurant."

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

(From Beauty's Mirror.)

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, clogged complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges those heated days. There's no need to do them, anyway, since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of exposure will produce a complexion that you'll have to "doctor" the way. As the scientific method of mercolizing is becoming the complexion never looks like a mask. Mercolized wax gradually takes away a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. At the home of the distinguished beauties of metropolitan society, stage and [illegible] you'll get no chance of it at your druggist's and see what a few days treatment will do. Use like cold cream. Another effective summer treatment—best method to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—distributing rouge by dusting. 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Its use as a face bath leaves no trace.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

"Give me the money."

Chapter 24.

TOM came over to the house to see Jennie the night her mother was so sick, and found Jennie sitting by the bedside holding her mother's hand. Her mother was asleep and Jennie tip-toed out of the room to talk to Tom. Jennie had begun to realize how selfish she had been and how unhappy she had made her mother—the way she had been acting the last few months.

All because she wanted good clothes and to dress and act like other girls she saw. She was crying, with her head on Tom's shoulder, for she knew her mother was very, very sick and the doctors had told her that her mother must have a good rest, fresh air and good wholesome food or she could not live much longer.

They hardly had enough money to exist from one week to the next, and she didn't see how she could do anything to help her mother get well. All this she sobbed out to Tom, with her head on his shoulder, in the midst of which there was a ring at the front door bell. Jennie went to answer it, leaving Tom in the other room.

Tom heard Jennie arguing with some one, and finally heard a man's voice say: "You either give me the money or I'll take the clothes back." Then Tom went out to see what the trouble was, and Jennie had to tell him it was the man from where she got her clothes and he wanted her weekly instalment or would take the clothes away from her, and she didn't have the money to pay him. Tom asked her how much it was and she told him $1.50, which he paid to the man.

When he had gone Tom asked Jennie how much more she owed on her clothes, and she told him $28.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty and in love with a man three years my senior who reciprocates my love, and we expect to become engaged within six months. I have known this man for about seven years, and know all his people very well. He has been calling at my home for almost a year, during which my folks have treated him very nicely. Suddenly my mother changed her attitude toward him, and says very miserable things about him. In fact, she wishes that I give him up. Her reason for this sudden change I do not know, only that she says she had had a foreboding that he is mean and will never make me happy. He is a very good young man, has no bad habits, smokes very little, and never touches liquor. He has a steady position with the government.

My mother feels that I should be able to get a man with more money, as I am considered very good looking. She is a very nervous sort of woman and one with whom you cannot reason. To give him up would kill me, as I love him very dearly and am only happy when with him.

BEATRICE.

AS a rule, I advise girls to obey their mothers, but your case is so exceptional I hope you will not give up your lover. You have known him seven years, and know nothing against him. Your mother is nervous, and bases her objection solely on a "foreboding."

My dear, love is too invaluable to be sacrificed for the whim of one who believes in "signs."

APOLOGIZE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am heartbroken these days. I kept company with a friend for two years, and over a little argument we parted. I am a young man of twenty-four, and dearly love my friend.

E. M.

IF the love is not worth the price of the humiliation of apologizing, it is not worth much. Tell her you are sorry, and be sorry, though in your own heart you may think you were not entirely in the wrong. Never offend again, remembering always that love is worth every price that is paid.

WILSON GIVES HIS VIEWS ON RURAL CREDIT AND DECLARES RELIEF SYSTEM IS COMING

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The following statement was issued at the White House today, embodying the views of President Wilson on rural credits:

Again and again during the discussion of the currency bill it has been urged that special provision should be made in it for the facilitating of such credits of farmers of the country who stand in need of agricultural credits as distinguished from ordinary commercial and industrial credits.

Such proposals were not adopted because such credits could be only imperfectly provided for in such a measure. The scope and character of the bill in its immediate and chief purpose, could not be made to reach as far as the special interests of the farmers require.

Special machinery of a distinct system of banking must be provided for if rural interests are to be successfully and adequately supplied. A government commission is now in Europe studying the successful methods which have been employed in several countries of the Old World, and its report will be made to Congress at its regular session next Winter. It is confidently expected that the Congress will at that session act upon the recommendations of that report.

Of Great Importance.

There is no subject more important to the welfare and industrial development of the United States. There is no reform in which I would myself feel a greater honor or privilege to take part, because I should feel that it was a service to the whole country of the first magnitude and significance. I should have accompanied and gone hand in hand with reform of our banking and currency system if we had been ready to act wisely and with full knowledge of what we were about.

There has been too little federal legislation framed to serve the farmer directly and with a deliberate adjustment to his real needs. We long ago fell into the habit of assuming that the farmers of America enjoyed such an immense natural advantage over the farmers of the rest of the world, were so intelligent and enterprising and so at ease upon the incomparable soil of our great continent, that they could feed the world and prosper, no matter what handicap they carried, no matter what disadvantage, whether of law or of natural circumstances, they labored under. We have not suggested their capacity or opportunity, but we have neglected to analyze the burdensome disadvantages from which they were suffering and have too often failed to renew them when we did see what they were.

Chief Disadvantages.

One of the chief and most serious of these disadvantages has been that he had not been able to secure the extended bank accommodations he needed and was in need of without paying the most burdensome rates of interest and saddling himself with mortgages and obligations of every kind which he fairly staggered under if he could carry them at all.

Our farmers must have means afforded them of handling their financial affairs easily and inexpensively. They should be furnished these facilities before their enterprises languish, not afterwards.

And they will be. This is our next task and duty. Not only is a government commission about to report which is charged with advising the Congress of the best methods yet employed in the study of the Department of Agriculture has undertaken a serious and systematic study of the whole problem of rural credits. The Congress and the executive workings together will certainly afford the needed machinery of relief and prosperity to the people of the countryside and that very soon.

Economy Board Has Budget Plan

Believing that the taxpayer should know more of the finances of the State, the State Commission on Economy and Efficiency has recommended to Governor Foss a totally new budget system, and a centralized purchasing department to buy all supplies of materials and supplies at wholesale.

The report of the commission is for the exclusive purpose of attempting to lower the tax rate, which at $8,000,000 this year, reached the highest point in history.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stock markets were firm at the opening, but in New York weakness soon developed and prices had a wavering tendency subsequently. At the end of an hour irregularity prevailed here, but price changes were narrow. Copper as a class did not reflect the advance in the London warrants market.

By 11 o'clock in New York prices had advanced and a number of leaders were showing large gains. Advances included Canadian Pacific 1½, Reading 1, Steel 1¼ and American Smelting 1⅝. Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northern Pacific, American Can, Amalgamated, Erie and Great Northern Ore were additionally higher. Southern Pacific was unchanged.

New York Market Soon Weakened.

The New York market was strong at the opening, but a number of leaders weakened soon afterwards. At the start Canadian Pacific and Texas Co. were especially strong, and there was a good deal of interest manifested in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. Texas Co. advanced ¾ to 119¾ while Canadian Pacific climbed to 237¼ for a gain of 1¼. After opening with a gain of ⅛ Southern Pacific went to 91⅝ for the loss of ⅛. Union Pacific, which sold ex-rights, opened at 154⅝ against 155¾ in general. Coppers were stronger.

St. Paul opened ⅜ higher, but immediately declined. Among the other advances were American Can preferred ⅝, American Smelting & Refining preferred ⅛, United States Rubber common ¼, Western Union ⅛, Utah Copper ⅝, Steel common ⅛ and Pacific Mail 1.

Steel soon lost its advance. Erie, Arizona and several other issues declined during the first half hour. The Curb was steady.

There was both a strong investment and speculative demand for American stocks in London, and the Canadian Pacific advanced. The improvement in the money situation rendered that market buoyant in general. Coppers were stronger.

Banks Must Not Aid Speculators.

The Wilson administration is against speculation in stocks, it is said, and one evidence of such opposition is the decision of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo not to deposit any of the crop moving fund in institutions which loan or borrow for speculative purposes. Information which will disclose what banks have or have not done in that line is sought for in reports asked for by the acting comptroller of currency in connection with his call for their condition on August 9.

"Upon the basis of this data," says a Washington dispatch, "expected to be available in time for the distribution of the $50,000,000, the Treasury Department will aim to differentiate between the banks which borrow or loan in connection with speculative operations and are chronic borrowers, and those which endeavor to relieve financial strain wherever it exists.

"Information of this character, it was announced, will now be required to be obtained by the Comptroller of the Currency in order that the Treasury Department may know what classes of borrowers are in need of additional circulation at various periods of the year. This information is to be the forerunner of other material changes in the character of information now being required in future to furnish the government."

Need Not Furnish "Conspiracy" Proof.

When Secretary McAdoo accused New York bankers with conspiring to defeat the currency bill by depreciating the market valuation of government bonds, there was strong sentiment in the Democratic Congressional ranks to have him furnish the evidence upon which he based the charge. Republicans were eager to hear details, too, and more persistent in efforts to get them. Democratic clamor ceased suddenly and when a resolution calling upon Mr. McAdoo to support his charge came up in the House, Leader Underwood had Democratic defeat it by an overwhelming vote. New York bankers said there was nothing to the charge. The matter became a partisan one in the House. While Leader Underwood was trying to squelch the resolution, Leader Mann, Republican, was trying to get it passed.

"Such a conspiracy is a crime punishable by heavy penalties, and this House should know about it," shouted Mann. "All of McAdoo's statements are official when dealing with questions of the Treasury.

"If the Secretary of the Treasury asserts that there is collusion in an important matter like this without giving Congress the facts, we have come to a pretty pass. I am surprised at Underwood that he is afraid to let the facts come out." Mann continued "I suspect, myself, that the charge is without foundation, and that the Secretary made the statement without the facts."

"The Republicans are not after facts," retorted Representative Fitzgerald. "They want to muddy the waters."

Money Easier in London.

The money situation has improved in London, according to the financial correspondent there for Hearst newspapers. He cables:

"Rate of dear money have been dispelled by a large influx of gold to the Bank of England, the position of the bank reserve is now strong enough to face the heaviest Autumn strain likely to be imposed.

"Many rates, therefore, are falling, and bank loans to the Stock Exchange are down to 4 per cent. Discount rates are lower and reductions on several stocks are only 2 or 3 per cent. Thus it seems probable that the markets were over sold.

"American stocks are especially difficult to borrow, while London is quite bare of stock, the Yankee market is being bolstered by New York purchases.

"Canadian Pacific, Erie and Southern Railway lead the gains, while one of the chief factors relieved by the public, will doubtless stimulate buying, is that so far business has not been injured.

London Copper Quotations.

The London copper warrants market opened strong, with spot and futures each £5s. higher.

Lake copper was sold yesterday in small quantities at 16 cents a pound for thirty day delivery.

It is stated that wire manufacturers are now "anxiously seeking" requirements.

The total net profits for the June quarter of the Utah Copper Company were $2,218,753, an increase of $682,291 compared with the previous year.

Financial News in Brief.

Invitations to attend the conference of bankers to be held at Chicago for the discussion of the Federal Reserve bill have been sent to forty-two banking associations and 128 clearing houses.

The proposed tariff on bananas imported into this country is protested by the governments of Columbia, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Jamaica and Panama.

Standard Oil of Ohio has declared a quarterly dividend of $3 a share and an extra of $1.

For the fiscal year ended with June, Texas Company's net earnings increased $8,010,570.

Well-informed persons in the trade are predicting that spelter will sell soon for 6 cents a pound.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, AUGUST 13, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The Boston American's Policy for Civic and Industrial Progress In Boston

FIRST, a greater Boston Port.

SECOND, the extension of more railroads to Boston.

THIRD, the establishment of new steamship lines in connection with this port.

FOURTH, the encouragement of new business enterprises.

FIFTH, a systematic plan for the development of Metropolitan Boston.

SIXTH, the improvement of the streets and transportation facilities.

SEVENTH, the promotion of education.

EIGHTH, sufficient and just laws regarding the manufacture and sale of foods.

NINTH, the establishment of permanent Grand Opera.

TENTH, the unremitting improvement of the AMERICAN, so that it may the better serve its constituents—the great reading public.

The Result of the Work Laid Out by the Port Directors Will Be Monumental

The Directors of the Port have issued a very interesting statement showing the work laid out under the act appropriating nine millions of dollars for the improvement and development of Boston Harbor.

The work projected is the completion of the Commonwealth Pier at South Boston, together with a grain elevator having a capacity of half a million bushels; the drydock at South Boston; the reclamation of several hundred acres of flats and the acquisition of the Eastern Railroad Pier at East Boston and the immediate construction on it of a first-class terminal like the pier at South Boston.

This work when finished, will require the expenditure of the nine millions of dollars available and, it is asserted, will BRING BACK TO THE STATE TWO DOLLARS FOR EVERY ONE DOLLAR EXPENDED.

The reclamation of flats that have long laid waste is one of the most profitable features of harbor development under State control. It can be demonstrated that the Commonwealth flats at South Boston are now worth a great deal more than the TOTAL AMOUNT spent by the State on harbor improvements.

At East Boston, the Commonwealth is about to begin similar operations to those in South Boston. This work takes time, but its result will be monumental if the work is pushed slowly BUT STEADILY.

The immediate improvement contemplated by the Port Directors is the reconstruction of the pier at East Boston which is on the very edge of the main ship channel, directly opposite the Atlantic avenue waterfront. The land on Atlantic avenue is held AS HIGH AS SIX DOLLARS PER SQUARE FOOT. The owners of the T Wharf property have offered to sell, and the Mayor of Boston believes the Port Directors should buy the T Wharf property, containing 100,000 feet, for $600,000. This shows how valuable waterfront property in Boston has become.

Boston ought to have a great public landing at the foot of State street—a marine gateway to the city. It would be a convenience to business and merits the serious consideration of the Port Directors.

BUT THE FIRST and immediate duty of the Port Directors is the improvement of our COMMERCIAL FACILITIES. Their work should always be planned with an eye for the benefit of the entire State. It is a STATE BOARD spending STATE MONEY and commercial improvements to benefit the S..ATE as well as the city should be its uppermost purpose. The commercial prosperity of Massachusetts in which all will participate is what this paper hopes to accomplish.

The Death Rate in Our Mill Cities

Senator Hollis of New Hampshire expressed a big truth Monday when, after denouncing New England cotton manufacturers for taking the highest protection and paying pauper wages, he added:

"It is a question whether one-sided development of this kind is best for any community."

"Thousands of adult operatives work for $7 a week and live under wretched conditions; the death rate in our New England mill cities is the highest in the United States," declared Senator Hollis.

The day is rapidly coming when the public will realize that industries that do not or cannot support their employes to such an extent as to promote a good, average citizenship, a fair standard of living, are a curse to the country.

When manufacturers are too greedy or too poor to pay a fair scale of wages, or, for instance, to make their factories safe, by all tried appliances, against appalling fire tragedies, there should be some method of either compelling them to maintain a public-welfare average both of pay and conditions, or of forcing them out of business.

Industries that make a very few men very rich and a great number of other men, women and children very poor and wretched are a menace to a democracy, the strength of which most always depends on its average of manhood and intelligence.

"One-sided development of this kind" is a blight on any community. Soon the public will take a strong hand in the struggle for manhood where they find the supply of it being sacrificed to the "Big Dividend" misers.

The Cruise of the "Piffle"

Copyright, 1913, by Mional News Service

"Cherrily, my hearties! Why, this is indeed a pleasure! To what am I indebted for this unexpectulated impingement? Who are you guys, anyhow?" This sailor-like language was uttered by that bluff old sea dog, Professor Slick, the first navigating officer of the battleship "Piffle," as he surveyed two strangers who had just entered his cabin. "I, sir," said the elder, "am The Spirit of '76! Can I be of any use to you in the Japanese matter?" "And I," said the other, "am the Monroe Doctrine. Is there anything doing in my line in the Mexican mix-up?" "Gentlemen," said Professor Slick, "I am at present considering whether to adopt a policy of discombobulous mediation or rambunktious protectorosity in the matters you refer to. My friend, Admiral Juice, here, will give you a lecture on the subject!" "With pleasure," replied the Admiral, laying down a bunch of Chautauqua reports, "but I'll have to charge you two dollars apiece. You know living is high!" Suddenly the boatswain of the "Piffle" entered, leading two large and active dogs. "What shall I do with these?" he asked. "Put them in the back parlor and tie them up tight!" replied Professor Slick, promptly. At this moment, without any warning whatever, the most frightful and discordant yells were——

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

Chapter XVII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth was right when she told her mother that one could not expect a man to write as often as a woman does. Certain it was that for the months following that statement Gordon Craig's letters came only once a week. They contained always the same excuse—that he was "fearfully busy," and that he knew Mary would not be vexed if he did not take time from his work to write often. After all, she understood him so well that she would make allowances. Once he wrote that if she found writing to him a burden, she must not feel that she must communicate with him when she was worn out.

"Just send me a line telling me how you are every week or, two," he suggested, "and promise to let me know if you are ill. But I cannot bear to have your letters to me add to your already over-heavy cares."

The girl smiled as she read. Even yet, she mused, he did not appreciate how much she loved him, how the thought of him was the only bright spot in her sordid life, that he and her mother were all the beings she had to love. But he did know her well enough to believe that she understood his not writing oftener. Did she not know that he was working for her, working with all the strength of his young manhood to make a home for her and to hasten the time when he could claim her and take her away from all this unhappiness and uncongenial toil? He did not say all this to her. But she knew, ah, she knew! And she loved him the better for not reminding her that it was for her that he was toiling and sacrificing himself.

"Of course I understand," she wrote to him in reply to his half-apology for his one-letter-a-week habit. "I know all about it, dear Gordon. Explanations between us are unnecessary. I can read between the lines and find there that which you do not write, that which I respect you for not writing. Each Monday evening now brings me a letter from you. Keep on sending me a line so that I will get it then, and I shall be satisfied. Somehow it gives me courage to go back to work each Monday, after a Sunday at home, if I know that when I return at night I shall find your letter in the box waiting for me. It has never failed me on a single Monday since you went away."

Why should she make any more protestations? She was not by nature effusive, and she could not write what was in her heart.

This message to Craig must have crossed his epistle to her, a hastily penned note, containing no news, saying merely that he was well and "still at it, up to his neck in work."

"But I have the satisfaction of knowing that I am making good," he added, "and that is a comfort to any man. I hope that by this time you are doing as well as you deserve."

There was something in this note, or lack of something, that made the reader vaguely uncomfortable. Surely next Monday's letter would be more satisfactory.

But next Monday no letter came. Yet on Tuesday there arrived a post card, saying, "Well as usual, fearfully busy. G. C."

The following week was the longest that Mary Danforth had ever known. She looked forward with an eagerness which she could not explain to Craig's next letter. She had a presentiment that matters were coming to a joyful crisis, that soon he would tell her what she already suspected, that she might expect him soon.

She sat in the office late on Monday afternoon, thinking. She had completed her work for the day, and now only waited for her employer's permission to go home. It was February, and the snow had begun to fall early in the afternoon. The light on her desk rendered the outer darkness blacker than usual. The wind struck against the panes with a force that made her shiver. She decided to ask Mr. Pearson if she might not go home now without waiting for him to sign the letters he had dictated to her. She knocked at the door of her employer's office and it was not until she had obeyed his summons to "come in" that she remembered that Mr. Fletcher had called to see him an hour ago, and was still in conversation with him. Bowing gravely to the visitor she proffered her request to Mr. Pearson.

"Surely you may go," was the kind reply. "I hope you have overshoes. It's a bad evening."

"Thank you!" she said. She remembered suddenly that when she had left home that morning the weather had been mild with the treacherous warmth that February sometimes brings for a day or two, and that she had foolishly worn thin shoes and a light jacket.

Bert Fletcher, watching her, may have seen a shade of dismay cross her features.

"Excuse me, Miss Danforth," he said, "but it is sure an awful night. I am not fixed up for it myself, so I'm calling a cab to take me as far as the elevated road. Let me take you along."

The look in his eyes was again like that of a kindly dog, Mary thought. She was tired, and was in a hurry to go home. An impulse made her answer frankly:

"Thank you! I will be glad to go as far as the elevated in your cab." Bert Fletcher could not afford to be extravagant, but he decided quickly that he would "blow the price of a cab all the way uptown" for this girl, whom he admired more than he had ever admired any other woman. But it was not until he was seated beside her in the closed conveyance that he remarked:

"I'm going to take you all the way to your home, Miss Danforth. You must let me do it just this once. Now don't say you won't, for it's fierce walking, and you need to be taken care of."

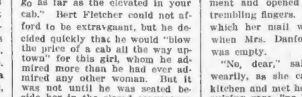
So worn was the girl that she found it pleasant to be taken care of "just this once." She recalled this pleasure with a sudden revulsion of feeling as she looked in the empty letter box at the door of the flat building to which Fletcher had escorted her. She hurried up the one flight of stairs to her apartment and opened the door with trembling fingers. But the tray on which her mail was always laid when Mrs. Danforth received it was empty.

"No, dear," said the mother, wearily, as she came out of the kitchen and met her daughter's inquiring gaze, "no letter from Gordon again today."

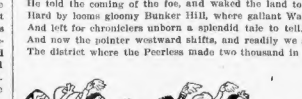
A LESSON IN HISTORY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

COME, children, gather round the map and listen while I name
The spots where heroes old and new have won immortal fame.
Right over here is Valley Forge, where, ragged, starved and cold
George Washington's devoted men proved their heroic mould.
At Yorktown, eastward and below, the long, hard struggle done,
That gallant band laid down their arms, for victory was won.
And here, a little north and somewhat to the right,
Is where the Peerless Leader made three hundred in one night.



Along the Massachusetts coast, when freedom's flickering light
Had almost disappeared from view, rode Paul Revere one night,
Unrouded by a thought of self, unmindful of alarms,
He told the coming of the foe, and waked the land to arms.
Hard by looms gloomy Bunker Hill, where gallant Warren fell
And left for chroniclers unborn a splendid tale to tell.
And now the pointer westward shifts, and readily we seek
The district where the Peerless made two thousand in a week.



Across the picturesque hills and plains on airy wings we skip
Until we see where Lawrence cried his "Don't give up the ship!"
Far south we see New Orleans, where, although the war was done,
Bold Andrew Jackson put to rout the British, horse and gun.
Up yonder, on the Chesapeake, there lie the rugged bones
That once stirred in the fearless frame of gallant old Paul Jones.
While here and there and everywhere throughout the spreading stage
The Peerless Leader has insured against approaching age.

Nature Schools—Children Should Not Be Forced to Study Subjects to Which Their Nature Is Indifferent. Outdoor Schools and Gardens Suggested as Solution to This All Interesting Problem.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

GREAT changes are taking place all over the world in methods of education. The former things are passing away, and the new things are better than the old.

A school of Organic Education has been established the last two years in Fairhope, Alabama, and the idea is now being talked and spread broadcast by progressive individuals.

Marietta Johnson, the principal of this parent school, has given her life and vitality to making the Nature Method a success.

She has been at Greenwich, Connecticut, giving a demonstration of her methods to over sixty pupils and twenty-six adults. It is her ambition and hope to make this demonstration so convincing that the public schools will follow her methods of instruction.

Here are some of Mrs. Johnson's very sane ideas:

"We know that many children 'fail' in school. We know that many grow indifferent and unhappy. We know that some are not strong enough to meet the 'requirements.' Then why in the name of education should we continue the treatment when the response is unsatisfactory?

Train Child According to Physical and Mental Equipment

"Why not sanely and bravely look the little child in the face and throw away all of the 'traditions of the elders' and all of our unrighteous requirements, and simply and religiously meet his requirements? How shall we know them? By the symptoms of his response or reaction. The test of a school is the condition of the child—bodily—mentally—spiritually.

"What does the body need? Fresh air, out-of-doors play, freedom, no stationary desks, no enforced silence, but quiet only when the occupation requires it. Much choice in occupation, physical co-ordination through creative handwork. What does the mind require? Time to observe, investigate, think and reason out a few things—often help and guidance from the teacher, but rarely ordered attention—experience, activities in harmony with age and interests—that is, things of sense in the early years, books, experiences of others, and abstractions in the later years.

"Why should education insist upon being uneducational? Our insane desire to 'educate' is a fatal barrier to development, which is the true education. Could a child's conscious striving and overeating make him taller or broader? Neither will conscious striving and overstudy make him wiser or better.

"Why not act as reasonably in education as in other things? If the nature of the little child requires freedom, why not give freedom instead of requiring him to sit at stationary desks and be silent? If his nature requires out-of-door fresh air, why not give that? Can't he learn anything out of doors? If his seeing should not be at close range, why give him a book at so young an age? Can't he learn anything without books?

Arrange School Work So Nervous System Is Not Overtaxed

"What is to prevent our taking the desks out of the room, and removing the 'intellectual requirements' of the first grades in any city? Instead of desks, have tables at which the children may work. Instead of requirements—in reading, writing, numbers, etc.—let the children make, play, make things of paper, cardboard, and textiles, taking care that the nervous system is not violated by too close work. Let them have gardens in which they may plant what they choose and care for in their own way with the sympathetic assistance of the teacher. Let them have stories of geography, history and literature. Give them an opportunity to learn to speak some other modern language than their own. Let them have water colors and clay which they may freely use. Allow the teacher to take them out of doors at any hour she may wish, taking them to parks and museums for the pleasure and profit of going and seeing rather than to prepare them to 'pass' any particular examination."
